BETSY AND I ARE OUT.

A FARM BALLAD.

TOGETHER WITH THE SEQUEL.

Draw up the papers, lawyer, and make 'em good and stout,
For things at home are cross ways, and Betsey and I are out.
We who have worked together so long as man and wife
Must pull in single harness the rest of our nat'ral life.

"What is the matter?" say you. I swan! its hard to tell;
Most of the years behind us we've passed by very well;
I have no other woman—she has no other man,
Only we've lived together as long as we ever can.

So I have talked with Betsey and Betsey has talked with me;
So we've agreed together that we can't never agree;
Not that we've snitched each other in any terrible crime,
We've been a gatherin' this for years, a little at a time.

There was a stock of temper we both had for a start,
Although we ne'er suspected 'twould take us two apart,
I had my various failings, bred in the flesh and bone,
And Betsey, like all good women, had a temper of her own.

The first thing I remember whereon we disagreed
Was somethin' concerning Heaven—a difference in our creed.
We arg'ed the thing at breakfast, we arg'ed the thing at tea,
And the more we arg'ed the question the more we didn't agree.

And the next that I remember was when we lost a cow;
She had kicked the bucket, for certain—the question was only—How?
I held my own opinion and Betsey another had,
And when we were done a talkin' we both of us was mad.

And the next that I remember, it started in a joke,
But full for a week it lasted and neither of us spoke.
And the next was when I scolded because she broke a bowl,
And she said I was mean and stingy and hadn't any soul.

And so that bowl kept pourin' dissensions in our cup;
And so that blamed cow-critter was always a comin' up;
And so that Heaven we arg'ed no nearer to us got;
But it give us a taste of somethin' a thousand times as hot.

And so the thing kept workin', and all the self-same way;
Always somethin' to arg'e, and somethin' sharp to say.
And down on us come the neighbors, a couple dozen strong,
And lent their kindest service for to help the thing along.

And there has been days together—and many a weary week—
We was both of us cross and spunky, and both too proud to speak.
And I have been thinkin' and thinkin' the whole of the winter and fall,
If I can't live kind with a woman, why, then I won't at all.

And so I have talked with Betsey, and Betsey has talked with me;
And we have agreed together that we can't never agree.
And what is hers shall be hers, and what is mine shall be mine,
And I'll put it in the agreement, and take it to her to sign.

Write on the paper, lawyer—the very first paragraph—
Of all the farm and live-stock that she shall have her half.
For she has helped to earn it through many a weary day,
And it's nothin' more than justice that Betsey has her pay.

Give her the house and homestead—a man can thrive and roam,
But women are skeery critters unless they have a home.
And I have always determined, and never failed to say,
That Betsey never should want a home if I was taken away.

There is a little hard money that's drawin' interrable pay—
A couple of hundred dollars laid by for a rainy day—
Safe in the hands of good men, and easy to get at;
Put in another clause, there, and give her half of that.

Yes, I see you smile, sir, at my givin' her so much.
Yes, divorce is cheap, sir, but I take no stock in such.
True and fair, I married her, when she was blithe and young,
And Betsey was always good to me, except with her tongue.

Once, when I was young as you, and not so smart, perhaps,
For me she mittened a lawyer and several other chaps;
And all of 'em was flustered, and fairly taken down,
And I, for a time, was counted the luckiest man in town.

Once when I had a fever—I won't forget it soon—
I was hot as a basted turkey, and crazy as a loon.
Never an hour went by me when she was out of sight;
She nursed me true and tender, and stuck to me day and night.

And if ever a house was tidy, and ever a kitchen clean,
Her house and kitchen was tidy as any I ever seen.
And I don't complain of Betsey, or any of her acts,
Excepting when we've quarreled, and told each other facts.

So draw up the paper, lawyer, and I'll go home to-night,
And read the agreement to her, and see if it's all right.
An then in the mornin' I'll sell to a tradin' man I know,
And kiss the child that was born to me, and out in the world I'll go.

And one thing put in the paper, that first to me didn't occur:
That when I am dead, at last, she bring me back to her,
And lay me under the maples I planted years ago,
When she and I was happy—before we quarreled so.

And when she dies I wish that she would be laid by me,
And lying together in silence, perhaps we will agree:
And if we ever meet in Heaven I wouldn't think it queer
If we loved each other the better because we have quarreled here.

"WE ARE NO LONGER OUT."

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

"What's up?" I'll tell you, lawyer, for I've come back, you see,
To fix up that agreement which you wrote out for me;
And tell you all about it, and settle up your bill,
For we don't need the contract now; I think we never will.

I took the paper you drew up down home the other night
To read it to our Betsey, and see if 'twere all right,
And after tea we both sat down to talk the matter o'er,
And see if we could both agree to settle on that score.

I told her how the starting point, whereon we disagreed,
Was something concerning Heaven—a difference in our creed;
And following in this the older usage, I don't remember how,
That I spoke of yesterday—about what killed the cow.

And of those other things, you know, I told her of them, too,
Just as nigh as possible as I told them to you;
Of how I said sharp things to her, and she the same to me;
And how the more we arg'ed the more we didn't agree.

I told her that after thinking on't back to the very start,
Since as we couldn't agree nohow that we had better part,
How it seemed that the more we arg'ed the sadder grew our plight;
That I wouldn't live with a woman if I couldn't treat her right.

Then I read her the agreement from "Whereas" on clean through,
And asked her to examine it and see if it would do.
Betsey read each paragraph and I asked her if 'twas right;
She gave the paper back to me and said it wasn't quite.

Then she went and took the Good Book, and opened to the page
Whereon was writ our children's birth, also the name and age,
And how five out of six of them were written with the dead;
And, as I read them names, I wished that some things hadn't been said.

And then she turned another page, where stood her name and mine
In this way:—"Married, May the 10th, in '29,
By parson Hood, of Pleasant Plains, John Blake to Betsey Lee."
Says she, "That is the contract, John, I think, for you and me.

You went me now to take it all, the live stock, farm and home,
And turn you out upon the world, at sixty-two, to roam;
But I can't never do that, John, you've been too kind to me;
We've loved each other and been true, only we didn't agree.

What boots it whether hollow-horn, or murrain killed the cow,
Since it weren't my place to get spunky and quarrel any how?
We'll let bygones be bygones, John, and take another start;
Been yoked together forty years, we won't work well apart.

And after all I think we'll let this new agreement be;
The old one's good enough; we've tried it—it's good enough for me—

And I'll hold my tongue hereafter, and not let it rattle so,
Then we'll be happy as we were some thirty years ago.

We loved each other in those days; mostways we thought so then,
For you chose me of all the girls, and I chose you of men;
And once Tom Jones, the lawyer, tried to cut you out, I think,
But I mittened him for love of you. Poor Tom! he died from drink!

Folks said that I was foolish then, but I have ne'er thought so,
For plenty's better'n poverty, and happiness than woe;
So John, we'll not break partnership; at least, we will not now,
But let our boat glide with the tide, with love to guide the prow.

We will not live much longer here, for we are getting old,
And the years that have been us over long will only be told;
Now let's be friends agin, and in Heaven we needn't fear;
We'll love each other better there, as we've been lovers here."

The rest belongs to Betsey and me, what was said and done last night;
To-day we are as we used-to-was, and all is going right,
For everything is settled, and the storm is all gone by;
There's no happier folk in all the land as is she and I.

And I've come to tell you, lawyer, that I want to pay your fee
For writing that agreement to which we didn't agree;
Your work was all right, lawyer, but the old one was so stout,
We thought that we would stick to it, for we're no longer out.

CHAPTER XLIV.

HOME AGAIN.

As Jasper had truly said, Diana had begun to think of it; and though the subject was not again alluded to, he knew that it was ever present to her. She rambled out alone, and he did not offer to accompany her; on the contrary, he devoted himself entirely to his mother; and so completely did he appear to be absorbed in the passing interests of the place that he might have forgotten the matter altogether.

But Diana knew differently. She knew Jasper too well to imagine that possible; but at the same time she believed that he wished to place her at her ease, and give her to understand that he never intended to recur to the subject, and that he wished her to consider it as quite at an end.

Probably Jasper was aware that he was pursuing the best course for his own interests; for, Diana, thrown entirely upon herself, and left to brood over and wonder at the position in which she found herself placed, could not drive the subject from her mind. Now it presented itself in one phase, now in another. Now she seemed to hear Madame de Mouline's gentle voice, beseeching her to help her brother, as she would have done had she lived.

And Jasper was so changed of late, she thought, for she had but read him superficially; or, rather, she had been deceived by the strong self control that he exercised over himself. Little did she know that he had watched her day by day—was watching now, and noting how her impulses were being moulded according to his will. And thus moved, pity, gratitude and a sense of duty were pleading with her to fulfil the wishes of the dead, and to prevent a life so full of promise as Jasper Seaton's from being cast back upon the wild waves that had heretofore threatened to be its destruction.

Suddenly she called to remembrance the paper that had fallen at her feet that evening at Broadmead, and which Jasper had snatched away so hastily. Perhaps it contained Madame de Mouline's dying wish to her; and she felt that she should like to see it—to see the request in her friend's own handwriting. She did not doubt but that Jasper still kept it carefully. Poor Jasper! If she had never seen John Carteret perhaps Madame de Mouline's wishes might have come to pass.

She understood now why Jasper had disliked and had opposed her engagement. Then she recollected how he had softened down, and had offered to settle a marriage portion upon her in order to secure her happiness; and how John Carteret had refused it, and she gave a deep sigh. She felt that Jasper had cared for her the most; that there had been something noble in his conduct; and now it seemed that it was in her power either to draw out that nobleness to its utmost, or to throw him back into the slough of former years, where she might also have been at this present moment had not her life been shaped by propitious circumstances, her soul drawn upwards through the mysterious influence of another soul.

Thus she reasoned day by day; and Jasper, watching keenly, knew that his cause was prospering. But he abstained from any allusion to their conversation on the Ross-trappe.

Mrs. Seaton was very kind; of late she had, for Jasper's sake, been more than usually considerate to Diana. The girl's proud spirit had been broken down by her sorrow, and she had done her part by being less defiant, and had accepted the kindness even more cordially than it had been bestowed.

And the days passed on and still their stay at Thale was prolonged; and Diana dreamed away among the Hars, until it seemed as though a spirit influence had fallen upon her and she was in a land of enchantment.

One day Jasper told her that they were going back to Broadmead.

"I think my mother has been long enough abroad," he said.

Going back to Broadmead! How strange it sounded.

"I am afraid you will be sorry to leave Thale, Di,"

"No. Thale is very beautiful, but I think I shall like to be at home again."

Yet there was a little hesitation in her tone.

"You are not quite sure?"

"One cannot be exactly certain of how one will feel. We have been abroad so long."

"And you half dread the quiet, monotonous old life at Broadmead?"

She shook her head; she knew that the old life would never come back again. And yet she answered:—

"We can go on with the old life, Jasper. There are no changes in the place."

"No, we cannot, Di—that is over for ever. If I had not spoken something of the old life might have gone on; but now it is impossible. The past must be a past that the future has nothing to do with."

"But that cannot be."

"I dare say I shall not like Broadmead as well as I used to do," he answered, noting Diana's heightened color and her trembling fingers as she clasped them tighter together to keep them still. "But I shall probably not be much at home. It will be pleasanter for both of us."

And still he kept his eyes upon her face, wondering what effect his words might have.

Jasper an exile on her account! She was weighing the thought and he knew it; and when she glanced upwards she saw a stern face, with eager eyes bent upon her.

"It could not be otherwise," he said, as though he had taken it into consideration; and yet there was a questioning tone in his voice.

"What can I do, Jasper?" she said, almost in a whisper. "I could not give you my heart. I cannot forget."

She did not waver in her old love, but he saw that she wavered in her decision. He knew that the new thought was paving the way for him, and he answered:—

"Not yet, Di—I do not ask you to decide now; but when all the past is still farther away, perhaps, in the future, you might try. In time—all that I ask is that you will sometime try to think of it—only try."

Then all the past uprose, pressing very heavily upon her, facing the future with its blank and the present with its possible duty. A life's good or evil was in her hands. Was it for her to throw away its chance of safety?

"I could try, Jasper. I will try!"

And Jasper knew that it was enough and that the end was certain. Time, to which he had trusted, would still befriend him, and he was satisfied.

And so they lingered through the summer and into the early autumn; and when the leaves were falling from the trees, and the glowing asters were blooming in the Manor House garden, the Seatons returned to Broadmead.

And the first news that Miss Pyecroft heard was that Jasper and Diana were really engaged at last.

"Just as we expected," said Letty and Sophia to one another.

Miss Pyecroft recalled the evening she had taken chocolate at Signor Neri's, and said:—

"I never had much faith in that other engagement."

Signora Neri drew Diana closer and closer to her as she sobbed out her experiences of the last two years; and when she came to her engagement to Jasper, and spoke of his kindness and goodness, the Signora clasped her to her heart.

"The blessed Virgin watch over thee, carissima; and bring all things right with thee!"

A great fear stole into her heart and she wondered how she should have happened as it had done.

"Giuseppe," she said to her brother, "if I had only seen Mr. Carteret I should have been satisfied."

"Still suspicious, Orsola?"

"Thou art no less so than I myself, Giuseppe. Mr. Seaton is no favorite of thine. I distrust him."

"But Mr. Carteret is married."

"Yes; I marvel how it came about. Yet Ercolo was married, and there were two weary hearts instead of one."

CHAPTER XLV.

OVERWORKED.

One of the first things that Jasper Seaton saw, in looking over a pile of papers that had accumulated during his absence, was a London newspaper of some weeks before, in which was chronicled the marriage of Henry Carteret, Esq., Barrister-at-Law—the ceremony being performed by the Rev. John Carteret, brother of the bridegroom.

The paper dropped from his hand. This, then, was the marriage to which Miss Carteret had, in all probability, alluded. The time corresponded exactly—the date being early in August.

He had been premature in returning to England. How did he know what further revelations were at hand? Fortunately, Broadmead was too sleepy to have its eyes opened very wide upon the outer world; and, as Diana seemed quite passive, it would be easy enough to hurry the marriage and when that was over all would go well. So Jasper destroyed the paper and hoped that nothing further would transpire. And again he argued, in the same spirit in which he had argued before, that it was no fault of his if Diana had misunderstood John Carteret's sister. To do Jasper justice, he had been similarly misled; though now he wondered that it had never occurred to him that John Carteret had brothers as like, or more likely, to marry than himself. If he had not been so thoroughly occupied with the one Mr. Carteret, who had brought him so much anxiety, he might have taken it into consideration.

Even now he argued, though against his own convictions, that possibly John Carteret might be married. There was no evidence to the contrary. This marriage of the elder brother did not set aside the marriage of the younger; and, at any rate, he was not called upon to disprove the belief that Diana had so thoroughly accepted.

Jasper held firm to his doctrine. As long as he perpetrated no active fraud, he held himself blameless, and allowed the tide of misconception and false impressions to flow onward, floating him on its waters to victory.

Nevertheless, he resolved to anticipate any disastrous contingencies that might arise. Diana, since her return to Broadmead, had come to look upon her marriage almost with a sense of relief, as putting an end to all the doubts and misgivings that now and then assailed her, in spite of her decision to carry out Madame de Mouline's wishes; and she listened calmly to all Jasper's plans for the future. Therefore, when he—more anxious now to hurry matters—suggested Christmas, Diana acquiesced; and Jasper determined that they would again leave Broadmead and spend the winter in Cornwall.

Mrs. Seaton was content to follow out anything that her son wished, and Diana cared too little about arrangements to dissent from anything. She only hoped she was doing her duty, and that all might turn out for the best.

"She is too quiet," said Signora Neri to her brother. "I have no faith in marriages where the heart is so disturbed."

"Mr. Seaton is satisfied," returned Signor Neri; "and the child will never have another dream. That is over. Her voice is a true interpreter, and through my art I have discovered much that has been unobserved by them. She will be happier as it is than in any other way. None will help her through Mr. Carteret's fickleness as Mr. Seaton will; he has known her from a child, and will make all allowances as none other could."

"I do not comprehend Mr. Carteret," answered Signora Neri. "I cannot believe him to be faithless. There is something wrong, Giuseppe. I know it—I feel it; and yet I dare not hint it to my darling. Why can I not speak, Giuseppe? What holds me back and chokes my voice? She asks me to come and see her married, and I half give my promise; and yet it seems to me that I must speak out and forbid this marriage that I dread so much. And still I dare not. What is it, Giuseppe?"

Signor Neri looked at his sister in surprise.

"The old prophetic spirit is returning to the family," he said, half playfully. "The sybil is coming to life in foreign lands. No, my Orsola," he continued, more gravely; "be calm—all is in better hands than thine. There is no chance in the happenings of this life; there is a plan whose every line is carefully marked out and man cannot mend it."

But still Signora Neri did not cease to regret that she had not carried out her wish of writing to Joan Carteret. It was too late now. If she had only obeyed her impulse!

Too late! surely not too late even yet—if she had only known. But John Carteret was lost to the Broadmead world. No one knew where he was—no one cared; and his doings had long been a matter of perfect indifference.

John Carteret, at this present moment, was energetically striving at his work. The gloomy streets, dark with the fog that rain and smoke produced, looked upon no more careworn a face than his. The hue of health had faded out of it, and it had become thin and sharp in its outlines; and though the earnest soul beamed forth and irradiated it when he preached to his congregation, yet the people of St. Anne's felt that their curate was an altered man.

"As unlike Mr. Derrington as possible, he is," said Mrs. Betterton; "and yet I can't help liking him. But one never gets beyond a certain point with him; and, in one way, one doesn't know him much better than the first day he came; and Mr. Derrington was as much at home at our house as if he was in his own. I can't think what it is about the man that makes me like him almost as well as Mr. Derrington himself, that we'd known for years."

Whilst Mrs. Penfold, dusting her rooms and preparing John Carteret's meals, came to the same conclusion as the churchwarden's wife. Perhaps she went a little beyond—for she declared that the Rev. Carteret was an angel.

"And if any one should know it, it is I as ought to do so, and likes Joshua. And he's no difficulty with accounts, which was always the Rev. Derrington's failing. Him and Joshua are like brothers in that respect—though, perhaps, not much in others," concluded Mrs. Penfold. For she could not disguise from herself that there the likeness ended—for Joshua, though an excellent son, was "a little short in his temper sometimes," as his mother expressed it, when he came in tired and hungry; which characteristic he had inherited, as she confessed, "from his father, Thomas Penfold, who had his weaknesses as well as his virtues;" whilst, on the other hand, Mr. Carteret was the placidest gentleman that ever breathed—too good, indeed, to live."

With which sentiment Mrs. Penfold watched her lodger day by day, and wondered how long mortal man could stand the life was leading. And yet he appeared to like it, and was very cheerful when he came in—she could not say "lively," as she would have done of Mr. Derrington; and he got through all his work, and did not seem to think of fatigue—though that might be, reasoned Mrs. Penfold, because he had no time to sit down and consider now hard it was.

But in spite of his contentment, the care lines came into his face, and the sharp outlines grew sharper, telling that mental activity and physical labor were wearing away the man.

To-day, Mrs. Penfold had been more impressed with the fact than usual, and had ventured for the first time to remonstrate.

"If you'd only take a holiday, sir, and go into the country to your friends. You are doing too much—indeed you are, sir."

"My friends live in town, Mrs. Penfold," answered John Carteret; "so I think the change would not be very great."

And a slight flush passed over his face as he thought of the one country place that was ever in his memory.

"Any change would be a rest, sir," continued Mrs. Penfold—who, having plunged into the subject, determined to pursue it. "You are working too hard, sir—if you'll excuse me being so bold as to say so."

"Life is work, and work is life, Mrs. Penfold."

"And work is death likewise, sir; and yours is too precious a life to be thrown away."

Again the flush passed over his face. He might himself have thought so once; but that was over now. Then he almost started; for Mrs. Penfold's words opened his eyes to a phase that he had not seen before. Perhaps he had been caring too little about his life lately. What right had he to be regardless of it? Life was a great and beautiful gift—not to be got rid of, not to be worn out before the time; but to be used wisely and well, until the time should come to restore it to the Giver—"Until I come to claim mine own, with usury." Possibly there was some truth in Mrs. Penfold's remark.

"I will think about it," he said, meditatively, as he went out.

"Ay, when it's too late," thought Mrs. Penfold. "But whoever would have thought that I should have spoken up as I have done—and he have taken it, too, quite seriously."

It was a damp autumn, and there had been much sickness about. John Carteret, fearless of infection, believed himself to be fever-proof, and took but few precautions. He went into close, hot, unhealthy rooms, and came out of them into the raw, unwholesome atmosphere. He got wet through; and in his wet clothing went from house to house, and came home to take a hasty meal, and half dry himself at the blazing fire that his landlady never failed to have for him; and then went out again, to minister to the sick and dying.

"Mortal man can't stand such work forever," repeated Mrs. Penfold—as, having worked herself into a greater state of anxiety than usual, she opened the door from time to time and peered into the drizzling fog, trying to see whether, up or down the street, Mr. Carteret was yet coming. He was later than ever this evening. He had taken a hurried dinner in the middle of the day, and had gone off again before she had been able to speak to him.

"And he ought to be in early to tea—for this is his sermon night."

And Mrs. Penfold dusted the easy chair anew and poked the fire; and then went into the kitchen to see if the kettle boiled.

At last he came, looking so ill that Mrs. Penfold involuntarily exclaimed—

"It's come at last, as I knew it would; and there's no one in all the parish worse than yourself, sir."

"I shall be all right when I have had my tea, Mrs. Penfold. It's my rest night to-night, you know."

And he seated himself by the fire, and shivered violently.

Mrs. Penfold looked at him for a moment, and then retired.

"There'll be no sermon to-night," was her comment; "nor yet on Sunday, nor a good many Sundays. If the doctor were to call in unawares, Joshua, my mind would be better satisfied," said Mrs. Penfold to her son.

"Is Mr. Cateret ill?" asked Joshua, springing up.

"He don't think so, but I do," answered Mrs. Penfold. "He'll never send for the doctor if his own accord. What had better be done, Joshua?"

"I'll go for him at once, mother."

And Mrs. Penfold's mind did not misgive her for taking a liberty, even when she heard the door close after her son, and knew that his recall was hopeless. She was not wrong in her surmises. John Carteret was ill, and it would be many Sundays before he would be able to do his work again, if at all. So the doctor said, looking very grave meanwhile. It might be the fever setting in; and if so he had so prostrated his strength that the doctor feared the worst.

"Fever!" ejaculated Mrs. Penfold.

The doctor looked sharply at her; something evidently struck him, that he was reasoning out in his own mind.

"Fever," he repeated. "If you are at all afraid, it might not be too late to move him; but it must be done at once. He might be better at home, perhaps," he added, musingly.

"Move him! Turn him out in such a state as he is in, sir! Do you take me for a heathen? After having had such as him in my house for well upon two years, do you think I don't know my duty better, sir?"

"I meant no offence," replied the doctor, seeing that Mrs. Penfold's wrath was rising. "Fever's a bad thing to get into a house, and you've your living to make. And with care, it might do Mr. Carteret no harm to move him; and ——" but Mrs. Penfold's face prevented his adding, "and he might be more comfortable at home."

"You leave me to make my living as I please, sir, and to know what's best about it." And as to Mr. Carteret's running the least risk in the chance of his through me, he won't do it, sir. If he had fifty fevers, I'd keep him and nurse him through them as well as any hospital nurse or doctor in the town. And Joshua will be as devoted as any slave. It's wonderful how fond he is of Mr. Carteret."

"Where are his friends?"

"In London, sir."

"You had better give me the address, and I will write to them."

"And——"

"I'll be in by midnight to see how he is. I shall know by then. But in any case his friends must be written to."

CHAPTER XLVI.

RAILWAY PASSENGERS.

There were four passengers in one of the first-class carriages of the train that ran between London and Marchington. Two of them were ladies, mother and daughter—the former somewhat advanced in years; the latter young, dark-haired and dark-eyed, a very pleasant maiden to look upon. The other passengers were gentlemen: an elderly, sunburnt man, with the traces of a nautical life visible in every action; the other considerably younger, not handsome, but with a countenance of great intelligence, and whose blue eyes had something fascinating in their gleam when they looked up from the pamphlet in which he was deeply engrossed.

The elder lady gazed anxiously from the windows of the carriage—wondering, at each station that they passed, how many more there would be before they should reach Marchington.

The younger lady was unable to answer her inquiries.

"I did not think of bringing a 'Bradshaw,'" she replied; "but I believe there are not many that we shall stop at."

The younger gentleman looked up. There was something very attractive in the speaker's voice, though he had been hitherto too much absorbed in his studies to notice his fellow passengers.

"We only stop twice between here and Marchington," he said; "and we ought to be there before four o'clock."

"Thank you," said the young lady, bowing, whilst the elder one leaned forward.

"Do you know anything of Marchington?" she asked, eagerly. "Are we likely to have any difficulty in finding a comfortable hotel there?"

"None at all, I should think, mamma," interposed the younger lady, with an English aversion to entering into conversation with strangers; "the place is so large that there must be numbers of hotels."

"The very size of the place may create a difficulty, Alice," returned Mrs. Carteret; whilst Charles Stanfield answered the question that had been addressed to him.

"I am afraid I cannot give you much information; but my father has been to Marchington several times and knows the place tolerably well."

Captain Stanfield, thus called upon, began to enumerate the principal hostelries of the town, giving a rapid sketch of their relative positions, merits, demerits and all other circumstances connected with them; to which Mrs. Carteret listened with attention; but which, in her present agitated state, had only the effect of bewildering her.

"Do you know Belford street at all?" she asked, when the captain had ended his description. "We wish to be near it."

"Belford street," said Captain Stanfield, meditating. "Yes, I believe I remember a street of the name; but it is in a very poor, out of the way part of the town. Are you quite sure that it is Belford street."

He hesitated; for there was something so incongruous between the street, as he faintly remembered it, and the two well dressed women opposite to him, that he thought there must be some mistake. Perhaps the idea of incongruity that he felt transferred itself to Alice Carteret, for she answered quickly:—

"I have no doubt it is the street we mean. My brother is curate at a church near, and he described it as a poor district."

Mrs. Carteret, who felt as if she remembered nothing with any certainty, had taken a letter from her traveling bag, and was looking at the date as if to reassure herself—though she knew the address as well as she did that of her own house.

In so doing, she dropped the envelope on the floor of the carriage, and Captain Standeld stooped to pick it up. As he did so, his eye caught the address, and he exclaimed involuntarily, "Carteret!" for his thoughts suddenly went back to Linthorp, and he looked inquiringly at Alice.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "but I couldn't help seeing the name on the envelope, and your mentioning that your brother was a curate made me think of a Mr. Carteret I met at Linthorp."

"That was John," said Alice Carteret, eagerly. "Did you know him?"

Mrs. Carteret turned round.

"Then you know my son?"

"Well, I can't exactly say that I know him, but I met a very handsome young curate at the house of a Lady Pechford, an old friend of mine——"

"Yes, yes, interrupted Alice Carteret.

"The admiration of every one at Linthorp, as far as I could make out, ank going to marry the prettiest girl I ever saw—if it is the one I mean."

"It must be the same," returned Alice Carteret. "I suppose Miss Ellis was very pretty, but the engagement is at an end."

"Ellis!" said Captain Standeld, with a bewildered look that had something ludicrous in its hopeless perplexity, while Charles Standeld's face went crimson, and he held his paper a little higher, in order to shade it. "No, I meant Miss Wardlaw, daughter of the vicar of St. Botolph," continued Captain Standeld, slightly emerging from the dazed state into which he had fallen.

Charles Standeld—still apparently absorbed in his pamphlet—was listening attentively.

"Oh that was just an idea—a wish of Lady Pechford's, nothing more."

Captain Standeld was mentally calling himself an idiot for having been misled by Lady Pechford's intimations. If he had only remained at Linthorp, Charles, insensible though he had seemed to be, might have been won by Miss Wardlaw's attractions.

"But that woman completely deceived me, and there's no telling what other mischief she may not have done," he reflected—little imagining how near he was to the truth. "I always felt that there was too much of the diplomatic in all her actions."

And once more he was plunged into a chaos of bewilderment, in which he mentally struggled, hopeless of emerging. All at once he ejaculated:—

"Diana Ellis—my god-daughter!"

And no sooner had he spoken the words, than he recollected what Dr. Crawford had once casually said upon the subject.

Alice Carteret started, and drew herself up a little.

Captain Standeld saw the movement, and understood it, and it made him undecided as to what to do or say next. But Charles Standfield, who had recovered his equanimity, came to the rescue in a manner that would have surprised Lady Pechford had she seen it.

"My father has only seen Miss Ellis once, and was quite unaware until that time that he had a god-daughter living. When my father saw her, she was engaged to a Mr. Seaton. You must pardon our having unwittingly occasioned unpleasant remembrances."

Alice Carteret bowed, but there was a degree of stiffness in the bow. And a silence fell upon the occupants of the carriage, who, from beginning to feel that they were almost acquaintances, relapsed in to a state of distrust. Mrs. Carteret withdrew into her corner, and wrapped herself more closely in her shawls and rugs. She felt aggrieved at finding herself in company with the godfather of the girl who—though her son had not admitted it—had cast, as she knew, a blight upon his opening life. And for the first few minutes, Alice Carteret felt it, perhaps, almost resentfully, but when her first surprise at Captain Standeld's exclamation was over, she began to consider that he was, in reality, quite blameless, and that it was absurd to have any feeling of enmity towards him, simply because he was godfather to a girl of whose existence he had been in ignorance until after she had given up her brother.

Captain Standeld anathematized himself for having made people uncomfortable, and the more innocent he felt himself to be, the more awkward and dissatisfied he became. It was not a matter for apology or explanation; all he could do was to do nothing, and he sat glancing occasionally at Mrs. Carteret and Alice, as if to watch for some sign of relenting on their part.

"I suppose there are good doctors at Marchington," said Mrs. Carteret, half in soliloquy, when they had gone on for some distance without speaking. "And I are will be no one to meet us at the station," she added, after a pause. "What shall we do? I am afraid John is very bad, or the doctor would not have written himself. What is the name of the place we have just passed, Alice? We must surely be near Marchington now. I never felt so tired of traveling before."

Captain Standeld's eyes were closed; perhaps he was asleep; but as Alice looked up to answer her mother she and Charles Standeld instinctively looked at one another, and their eyes made a mute deprecation of the position in which they were all placed.

"If you will allow my father and myself to assist you in any way, we shall be most happy to do so. My father is an old traveler; and, perhaps, on the strength of our acquaintance with your friend, you will accept our services."

"Thank you," said Alice, "we shall be much obliged. Mamma is not much accustomed to traveling; and to-day we had to start at a moment's notice without making any arrangements, for I fear my brother is very ill."

"I trust not," said Captain Standeld, suddenly rousing up. "I hope your son is not seriously ill."

Mrs. Carteret was a gentle and amiable woman, and the tone of sincerity in which Captain Standeld spoke had its effect.

"My son," she replied, "is threatened with fever, which, it appears, has broken out in the neighborhood in which his duty lies. The doctor who writes says there is no occasion to be alarmed, as there is no immediate danger; only he thinks it advisable that his friends should come to him."

Captain Standeld looked grave.

"And are you and this young lady about to run the risk of going into a house infected with fever, madam?"

"I must go to my son," answered Mrs. Carteret, simply.

"And it is not as though one were running a risk needlessly," interposed Miss Carteret—seeing the doubtful expression on the captain's face. "This is a case in which we could not possibly do otherwise than we are doing."

"I suppose not," he answered deliberately. "I suppose not. Still, it's a risk"

"One puts risks aside when love comes into the question," said Alice Carteret, a little warmly; for Captain Standeld seemed to her but a cold, calculating sort of man, and she wondered whether his son was of the same nature. Suddenly she met the dark eyes, gleaming very pleasantly.

"My father is not so hard hearted as you would imagine, Miss Carteret. He has nursed me most tenderly through two fevers."

Alice Carteret glanced back at the captain, who was becoming much interested in the companions thrown in his way. As usual he was beginning to build castles in the air on his son's account, and he wondered if he were sufficiently awake to perceive what an exceedingly pleasant face the younger lady possessed, and whether the time would ever come when Charles would fall seriously in love, and he should have a daughter. But his son was once again absorbed in his pamphlet and Captain Standeld half regretted that he had allowed him to follow his military tastes. "Love" certainly did not "rule the camp" in his case, and he feared it never would.

Mrs. Carteret having accepted Captain Standeld's further offer of services, that worthy man set to work to contrive how he might make the most of his permission.

"I shall be in Marchington for some days," he said. "My son is wishing to see about guns; and, as I have leisure, I shall be glad to be at your service."

He felt, he knew not wherefore, a sort of interest in John Carteret; partly, perhaps, through a reproachful feeling at the injustice he had done him in the matter of Miss Wardlaw—partly through the admiration he felt for John Carteret's sister and his anxiety to provide for his son's future welfare.

Charles Standfield, unconscious of his father's meditations in his favor, continued calmly to peruse his paper, now and then listening to the conversation, which was becoming animated; for Captain Standeld, having wedged in his oar, was working down the stream gallantly, and had so inspired Mrs. Carteret with confidence that she was beginning to believe that Providence had sent her a guardian angel; and when, upon their arrival at Marchington, he proposed seeing her safely to Belford street, she did not decline the offer.

"I shall be at the hotel, Charles, in less than half an hour," said Captain Standfield. But though he promised, and intended to keep his promise, he did not carry it into execution; for John Carteret had become rapidly worse and Mrs. Carteret's distress was so great that it was all her daughter could do to calm her.

"He has worked out his strength," said the doctor to Captain Standfield; "and it will go hard with him."

Then Captain Standfield's mind was made up, and, accustomed to authority, he took matters in his own hands.

"I've been a sort of doctor myself," he said, "and I shall sit up with Mr. Carteret to night."

Charles Standfield, waiting at the hotel, wondered what had become of his father, when a note was brought to him.

"Don't wait dinner for me," it said. "I've had a chop and a glass of wine at an inn near. Mr. Carteret's as bad as he can be. Doctor's made a mistake. Fever upon him for days. Shan't leave him.

Yours, &c."

Perhaps, as Charles Standfield sat down to his solitary meal, a thought of knight-errants, culminating in Don Quixote, might have haunted him. The kindly, child-like, straightforward nature of his father caused him to fall into many adventures that would not have been met with by other men. How oddly things turned out! Who would have thought of Captain Standfield's nursing the curate of St. Botolph's through a fever! Not Lady Pechford, certainly. Diana Ellis' rejected lover! Charles Standfield began to feel a little sympathetic. His own little disappointment had been the only secret he had ever kept from his father. But it had faded away—it was a thing of the past. Diana was a girl, not worth thinking of. Yet who would have expected it from such a seemingly natural and unsophisticated girl?

OUR PORTRAIT GALLERY.

MISS EMMA HOWSON, OPERATIC VOCALIST AND ACTRESS.

This young lady is a daughter of the late Frank Howson, a musician and actor of ability, and a niece of Mme. Albertazzi, a prima donna of great repute some thirty years since in London, Eng., and Paris, France. Miss Howson is a native of Australia, and there made her first appearance upon the operatic stage. In conjunction with her family, all of which possess considerable musical ability, she arrived in San Francisco, Cal., in June 1868, where, during a period of three and a half years, she pursued her profession, appearing in Italian and English Opera, Oratorio, Concert and opera bouffe, being the original impersonator in that city of the leading roles in "La Grande Duchesse," "La Belle Helene," "Barbe Bleue," etc., in all of which she was successful. In 1869 she came to New York and shortly after made her first appearance at Wood's Museum at a matinee performance, appearing in opera bouffe. During the past season she was a member of the Grand English Opera Combination. She has recently added to her repertoire Suzanna in "Nozze di Figaro" and Reiza in "Oberon." She possesses a highly cultivated soprano voice, sweet and pure in tone, and rich and sympathetic. As an operatic artist she exhibits more than ordinary dramatic ability, as has been clearly evinced by her performances in English drama at Niblo's Garden, in this city, where she has been performing for the past few weeks. Young in years, she has, we think, a brilliant future before her.

ACROSTIC.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER, BY WESTERN.

How are you, Bill? Come sit ye down and let us have a chat
Of the old days in 'Prison, when we were broke dead flat;
Where have you been these many years far from your home away,
In Oregon or 'Stralia? both countries I dare say.

Sam, when I said good-bye, old chum, on the "Gold Hunter's" deck,
The night "Old saddle" scooped us out of every ivory speck;
Henry enough at heart, old boy, but naught left in purse,
I really wished that I was dead, dead broke seemed almost worse.

Six weeks passed (acres to me) before we sighted land,
Far, far away, on our port bow, we saw Australia's sand;
Of its exhaustless mines of wealth we'd often talked, and I
Resolved to have my share of it, or know the reason why.

How hard I toiled for six long years, no tongue but mine can tell—
I struck a lead last Christmas eve, "you bet" it panned out well,
Not thirty thousand for my claim, lit out for home, and I
Have come to share the gold with you; "here's smile," I'm somewhat dry.

A GLANCE AT EUROPE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY A TRAVELING SHOWMAN.

THE CITY OF ANTWERP.—A NIGHT IN THE GERMAN OCEAN IN A STORM.

A journey of twenty-seven miles from Brussels brings us to Antwerp, the chief commercial city of Belgium, a place of considerable importance, with a population of 102,761, located on the banks of the river Scheldt, sixty miles from the sea. The fortifications are very extensive and of immense strength, and the magnificent docks, built by Napoleon, are capable of receiving two thousand ships. The streets of Antwerp wind and turn so that a stranger has no small difficulty in choosing his way, which is amply repaid, however, by the grotesque architectural combinations produced by the endless turnings. The quaint old houses, six and seven stories high, tapering up to a pinnacle and their fronts adorned with luxuriant tracery, present themselves in such groups that you are inclined to overlook the irregular construction of the city.

Advertisers must hand in their favors before 6 o'clock on Monday evening, in order to have them appear in that week's issue.

To Correspondents.

C. E. W., Jamestown, N. Y.—The Franklin, No. 3, of Brooklyn, hand engine, is said to have thrown 320 feet, through a one inch nozzle, at Albany, N. Y., but we are not acquainted with the particulars thereof, and question the correctness of the statement. The next best throw on record is by a hand machine, horizontal, in 240 feet, by an engine formerly owned by No. 34, of this city. 2. We have no record of the best running jump on level ground. Howard jumped from a firm block of wood, two feet long, wedge shaped and raised four inches in front.

T. W., Eagle Hotel, Philadelphia, Pa.—John C. Heenan and Tom Sayers did not have a benefit at Free Trade Hall, Manchester, Eng., but they did have a sparring bout there five days after their great battle at Farnborough, under engagement to J. Cushing & Co., of circus fame. That is to say, it was an exhibition not a benefit, they being under engagement to the parties above named, at a salary of £500 per week, each, we are given to understand.

J. Q. A., Chicago.—1. Shaughnessy's time in his match with Anson, at Newmarket, 1 mile, 2 fur., 73 yds., was 2 min. 10 secs., which was at the rate of 1:40⅝ to the mile. 2. Which Eclipse do you mean, American or English Eclipse? 3. No official time is taken in England. Gladiateur is reported to have run the 2,000 guineas course, 1 mile 17 yds., in 1:39, but this is not official or reliable.

Geo. H. C., Phila.—1. Flora Temple is recorded as having trotted 189 races, received forfeit in three, and made a draw in one. 2. She was beaten once by George M. Patchen, and compromised once, after having won two out of three heats, darkness coming on. 3. She trotted upwards of thirty races after she made her record of 2:19¾, at Kalamazoo.

J. B. B., Bangor, Me.—Aaron Jones defeated Bob Wade only. He was beaten by Orme (twice), Paddock (twice), Sayers and McCools. 2. Tom Paddock defeated Harry Broome, May 19, 1851. He was born in 1824, and died in 1865. Broome was born in 1836, and died in 1865. 3. Cannot state positively. Better write to Joe himself, in our care.

W. S., Newburyport, Mass.—There is no rule to govern the question, but in our opinion the party holding the ace may take up the trump or turn it down if he has to throw away a better card than that on the rack, at his own option. That is to say, it ought to be under such a ruling as the dealer's had at euchre.

G. L. D., Broadway.—The dealer having turned up the card for trump, has no say until the other players have passed upon it; if neither player orders it up then the dealer's turn comes; if he does not, the player can make it the way it is or have trump be please; if it is made passed the dealer can then make it.

E. W. M., Wintersett.—1. Dexter was bred by Mr. Hawkins, Orange Co., N. Y., who sold a half interest to Mr. Geo. Alley, of Westport and Fowcett, who next bought him. After the death of Mr. Trussell, Mr. Fawcett owned him and sold him to Mr. Bonner. 2. Lexington belongs to Mr. J. Alexander, and now stands at Woodburn, Ky.

Washington.—The Charrm medals were awarded to Radcliff, McBride, Fisler, Reach and Sensenderfer, of the Athletics; Waterman, Hatfield and Johnson, of the Cincinnatis, and Wright, of the Unions. 3. As B did not throw, the bet is a draw.

C. Philadelphia.

Connecticut, Philadelphia, Pa.—"At auction pitch A has two to go, B one, and C one to go. B gives A two, when puts him out; A makes high, jack and the game, and C low, which of the two, B or C, goes out first?".....B, not having been set back, went out first with his point for high.

Fourth Avenue Car.—Our delay in responding was caused by our inability to get reliable information given at responsible hours. We are now able to state, however, that the small passenger horse cars for city travel on the 4th avenue line commenced running in June, 1859. The Harlem R. R. travel by steam commenced in 1833.

F. J. M., Washington, D. C.—Walter Otbert's version of "Richard III" you will find printed in the Modern Standard Drama; it differs materially from the original text of Shakespeare. You can procure a copy for 15 cents at any book store in your city where plays are sold.

Allegheny.—Those who bet that Mace would win inside of 1 hour and 17 minutes, lost. All other bets were off, because the fight was not resumed before the following Sunday, as required by the rules, unless it was mutually agreed by the betters to let them stand; if so, they must be paid as the battle money is awarded.

Box, Titusville, Pa.—1. The longest standing jump on record is 13 ft. 9½ in., by Big Charley. It was made in Big Jump Field, Mt. Loomis. In a previous match with Bob Way, Searles cleared 13 ft. 9 in., Way covering 13 ft. 11¼ in., his best jump.

Jerry Buck.—1. We have no knowledge of any law being passed in our Legislature regulating the celebration of St. Patrick's day. 2. The day has been celebrated in each recurring anniversary for many years past.

J. O., Trenton, N. J.—Negro minstrels, to color their faces and hands, use burnt champagne corks burned, and then reduced to a fine powder, which they mix with water, and then rub it over their faces and hands. Soap and water will readily remove it.

C. B., Providence, R. I.—You are mistaken. The race on August 23d is between the Tyne and St. John Paris crews alone, at St. John, N. B.; that on August 30th takes place at Halifax, and is open to all crews.

Cymrain.—1. The Sorosis is a politico-social club of women, organized for the purpose of furthering the interests of the woman's rights movement. 2. We never give the residences of professional people.

M. McE., Providence.—It was an error, attributable to inadvertence, and we regret that you were the loser by it. O'Baldwin was never beaten by any one but Marsden, whom he afterwards defeated.

W. J. S., Sharon, Pa.—There is no recognized champion club swinger of America. Several have claimed it, but a title gained without contending for it is valueless.

Hodgkinson, Manchester, Conn.—Fanny Ludlow's time is better than Herzog's: the latter ran an even mile in 1:43, and the former a mile and an eighth at the rate of 1:43 1-6 to the mile.

J. Mc. G., Jersey City.—1. We don't know. 2. The horse on the ground is entitled to the whole $50. No forfeit being mentioned, the entire stake was play or pay. No answer by mail.

W. P., West Point, Ia.—In our opinion, the game having been finished by scoring the four points, the agreement terminated; therefore, A won.

C. W. R., Ithaca.—Lady Thorn's fastest consecutive three heats in a race were 2:19¾, 2:21¾, 2:19¾. Goldsmith Maid's fastest consecutive three heats, 2:19¾, 2:19¾, 2:19¾.

J. V. B., St. Louis.—1. We have no information on the mooted question. 2. Trouting, 2:17¼, by Dexter; pacing, 2:14½, by Billy Boyce.

W. J., Olneyville.—In the last Northumberland Plate run at Newcastle, June 30th, Tarsban was first, Falkland second, and the Dwarf third.

Dowan House, Cleveland, O.—The bet stands; the stakeholder having acknowledged the receipt of the money he is in honor bound for the whole amount.

A Constant Reader.—King and O'Baldwin were never opponents in a fight. King and Mace fought twice, each winning once.

Brooklyn.—1. It has already been twice published in our columns, and we can't insert it again. 2. Not upon record. John Howard's jump of 20 ft. 7 in. was made from a slight elevation.

Rob Stockton, Boston.—After one player has been allowed to reclaim his card, the third player can rightly claim the same privilege, but the card played can be called afterwards.

Constant Reader, Natchez.—You lose your bet, as a flush of three cards does not beat three tens. It requires five cards to constitute a flush, and if you bet on a three card flush you lose.

Johnson, Prescott City, Texas.—We are not acquainted with the case of Gregg. There is no game called brag, but it is a widely different game from Casino.

A. J. F. D., Boston.—1. The Jack is scored the moment it is turned. 2. Nothing having been said at the time of making the match, forty-one games are the winning.

Chas. N. W., Washington, D. C.—We cannot make room for scores of any but important games, of interest to the general public, at this season.

Boyd, Hill's.—Gladiateur is said to have run the Two Thousand Guinea Course, 1 mile 17 yards, in 1:39, but as the English time is not official, we cannot endorse its correctness.

James Brock, San Francisco.—If the Umpires disagreed then the referee must decide, and his decision is final. It is impossible for us, from an ex parte statement, to decide upon a question of fact.

J. D. F., West Troy, N. Y.—We do not know her whereabouts. A letter addressed to her, in care of this office, will probably reach her.

Chess.—Your question was answered in the chess column. To repeat:—A player may have as many queens as he can get pawns on the 1st row. Q. E. D.

J. C., Topeka, Kansas.—We are not in that line of business. Better communicate with some one of the dramatic agencies advertised in our columns.

Inquisitive.—1. To become a correct singer it is necessary to read music. 2. Yes. 3. You use it improperly. 4. No. 5. John Har is traveling with Ryman, Hart and Barney's Minstrels.

Kentonian.—Barnum is not known as a man who ever claim the money; he should have assured himself that the game had not been played, before consenting to draw.

Engineer.—Longfellow's time of 1:40, being the first mile of a two mile and a quarter race, does not go on the record, although a part of the record itself for the entire race.

E. P., Sharon.—1. Joe Goss hails from Wolverhampton, Eng. 2. The long standing jump on record is 19 feet 9 inches, by Jack Howard, standing, 13 feet 5¾ inches, by Ed. Searles.

O. P. D., Toronto.—John C. Heenan is alive, and resides in this city.

Mr. A. F., Moulton House, Bay City, Mich.—Thank you for the cards, which were received on the 24th.

J. L. H., Freehold, N. J.—1. B is not out. 2. B would not even then be right. 3. No.

Constant Reader, Sacramento.—It is a double-header, and the pot remains on the table to be settled by the next deal.

W. H., Warrensburgh.—Dexter is 13 years old; Lady Thorn, 16, and Fellowcraft, 20.

An Old Sport, Hoosick Falls.—We know nothing about the "Professor" to whom you refer.

A. G. W., Montrose, Pa.—Two throws only are allowed at Poker dice, unless otherwise agreed upon.

St. John, N. B.—The references given are merchants of standing, therefore we presume that it is a genuine scheme.

O. E. A. D., Columbia Farm, Pa.—We have no knowledge of his whereabouts.

W. C. Chew, Barnum's Circus.—The item contained no news. Send route ahead.

Subscriber, Albany, N. Y.—A. T. Stewart's new house is on the corner of thirty-fourth street and Fifth avenue.

G. R., Baltimore, Md.—We do not know anything of the standing of the firm. They are agents for the lottery.

R. and W., Boston.—When the dealer is matched in a three handed game his opponents are entitled to two points each.

Herzog.—The number of "matches" won—not games—best three in five, decides the question of the championship this season.

Owens Olley.—The base runner has the right of way in the case you quote.

G. W. L.—Not being a regular game there is no answer to your question—merely a matter of opinion.

J. W., Evansville, Ind.—Should like to accommodate you; but space will not admit of such old time publications.

Silk Jim.—The bookmaker lost just what the fraud went off with, though it did not look so.

A. S.—The Mace-Coburn affair still remains in an unsettled condition. We do not answer correspondents by mail.

Occasional Reader, Hartford.—The difference of time between Liverpool and New York is 4 hours and 57 minutes.

Subscriber.—At poker, a hand of three fours and two fives beats one of three deuces and two tens.

Frank Melville, Passaic, N. J.—The fastest racing time on record is Billy Boyce's, 2:14¾, made at Buffalo, August 1st, 1868.

D. F., Baltimore.—If the bet was on the time as indicated by a certain clock, A won, but if the bet was on the time of day, B won.

A. R., Troy, N. Y.—Jerry Hawkes defeated Tim Collins without receiving a black eye.

F. J., Crow Wing, Minn.—Gold sold for 288, the highest point reached during the war, on July 11th, 1864.

Rob. S. R., Saltsburg, Pa.—Your subscription expires with the present number.

W. F. H., Fair Haven.—The fastest trotting time on record is 2:17¾, by Dexter.

R. E. S., Philadelphia, Pa.—What the law may be in your state we know not; but in this it is one year.

E. W., New Haven, Ct.—Unavoidably crowded out of last issue, as to appear now is publication in title.

R. S. O., Pa.—The official list published by the War Department is, of course, the best authority.

Penn Squirrel.—We have no room for anything of the kind just now.

Alex. Patterson, Quoit Player.—You can obtain a letter by calling at or sending your address to this office.

Subscriber.—Believe that parlor skates like those used by Mce and Goodrich are not on sale.

Rochester, New Orleans.—State the distance thrown, name of engine, number of feet of hose and size of nozzle.

W. H. H., Kentucky never ran seven, nine miles against time. 2. No. 3. Joe is thought to be the most artistic, but Mace is quicker.

Tyro.—At cribbage, two sixes, two fours and one ace count eight points, viz.: four for fifteens and four for pairs.

J. C., Bonaparte.—Five have already had something in that line, similar to yours.

Will Wood.—The parody would lose its point, we not having read the original.

Subscriber, Milford, Mass.—The Goddess of Liberty is the head, and the eagle the tail, on the American dollar.

Reader, S. W., Va.—Dexter's fastest recorded time is 2:17¼, and by such record he can trot in 2:16¾.

Constant Reader, Pittsburgh.—If the bet was by horse, man, boat, or what? We do not answer questions by mail.

Commercial, Philadelphia.—Unless it has been specially agreed upon, the stakes are not decided when half a partner sacks.

T. B., Pittsburgh.—If the dealer takes up the trump his partner cannot play it alone.

Frank R., Titusville, Pa.—1. The change is fifty dollars. 2. No, it would be the same from July 4th.

J. A. Fortunato, Petersburg, Va.—You had better write to one of the domestic agencies in this city.

J. H., Morrisania.—And the advertising columns of the Clipper.

Arthur Mentzer, Humboldt, Texas.—You may be able to secure what you need in that line by advertising.

W. F. K.—At euchre a player can build two pins at the same time.

A. T., Philadelphia.—We do not like either of your last pieces.

H. de S.—You have stated the cases for such reports correctly.

F. Derby, Pittsburgh, Pa.—She is still in the business.

J. W., Philadelphia, Pa.—Take no notice of the letter.

Jas. Murray, Pittston.—Ed. James, who advertises.

Dr. Frank Blanc.—Will probably use the one sent.

Abscond.—The letter has been sent to the lady.

Harry H., Fort Riley, Ka.—I. Ka. 2. Mo.

Engineer.—Sixes beat aces at poker dice.

E. Keck.—"Embarrassment" accepted.

H. S., Denver.—A must make 20.

R. W.—George was born in 1835.

Arthur.—Accepted.

Summer Resorts.—There are not so many persons at the summer resorts this season as heretofore, the fashionable places, especially, suffering greatly in this respect. Various causes may be assigned for this falling off, the dulness in business during the past year, and the consequent scarcity of money, being one of the principal; but another reason, and a very plausible one, too, is the inconvenience and discomforts of hotel life at these fashionable retreats, to say nothing of the inattention and incivility of the waiters to those guests who do not fee them largely; for it is not an easy matter to get a good square meal at one of these crack hotels unless you are "in" with the attendants, or have "seen" them beforehand. You may notice a guest at your table "faring sumptuously every day" on "everything the market affords," yet if you should seek to follow his cheerful example, ten to one that the waiter snubs you with one of them looks, always provided that you have not bribed him as the knowing ones have done. Some landlords wink at these cunning little acts of their employees; in fact, waiters are known, in some instances, to "work for nothing," considering the opportunities for "picking up" of far greater value than wages. Newspaper correspondents, in many cases, furnish the most fulsome reports of life and luxury at the watering places, magnifying a handful of people into great throngs, and telling fabulous stories of the enjoyment of the visitors and the groaning condition of the tables. If you should happen to drop in at one of these big hotels, you will not be long in learning "how it is yourself." Proprietors of hotels would do far better were they to abolish this "fee" business, and thereby have their guests put on an equality. We do not believe that the present season at the seaside or at the springs will be very remunerative, notwithstanding the encouraging prognostications of newspaper correspondents.

The Prize Ring.—It will be seen by reference to our "Ring" department that Messrs. Coburn and Mace, not being able to settle their differences in any other manner, have concluded to enter into a fresh match, letting the old one go for what it is worth, and try conclusions in another meeting near New Orleans. Since they appear to be desirous of encountering each other again, supporters of the ring, and admirers of the science of manual defence will certainly look for a better display than these two exponents of the manly art made when they cut to waste so much time in their meeting in hostile array on Canadian soil in May last; and there will be those who will look upon the new match as a money-making speculation rather than as a bona fide intention on the part of the principals to hurt each other; but the match seems to have been fairly made and the belligerents act as though they "mean business."

New York Politicians in Europe.

How happy are they who erstwhile went away,
And sail-ed far over the ocean,
For, not being here, they have nothing to fear
From the terrible Orang-e commotion.

What "Our Jim" Knows About Farming.—"Our Jim," who dabbles a little in everything, has, for the past few days, been strangling cats at a fearful rate, and planting them under our grape arbor. On inquiring of the sanguinary youth what his object was in so doing, he replied that that was the way to raise cat-arbor grapes.

Brooklyn Ladies have petitioned for the enforcement of the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday. Its a selfish feeling, however, for they hope to have the men all to themselves when no drinking is allowed.

"The Woolwich Infant" is the name of England's big gun. Probably so called on account of the noise it makes.

"Our Jim" wants to know whether the real Polish people are any better than our own boot blacks.

NEWS OF THE WEEK BOILED DOWN.

☞ A careless traveler, whose name is unknown, had $180,000 in bonds stolen from him at Harrisburg, Pa., on July 20th. He had left the bag containing the money under the seat of the car while he went to get refreshments.

Boyd, John F.—Of Portland, and the last surviving member of the class of 1812 of Bowdoin College—Portland, Me., July 20th, aged 80.

Blodgett, Capt.—Late of the steamer Carlisle—found drowned in the Ohio river—Cincinnati, O., July 19th.

Cavada, Gen. Frederico Fernandez—The Cuban patriot, born in Cienfuegos, Cuba, in 1833, educated at Philadelphia, and became a civil engineer. During the rebellion he served with distinction in the army of the Potomac; and at the battle of Gettysburg, having attained the grade of lieutenant colonel, he was captured by the Confederates, together with the greater portion of his regiment, and was confined in Libby prison, where he remained for nine months. During his imprisonment he composed a little work, which, being afterwards published under the title of "Libby Life," attracted great attention, subsequently he accepted the position of adjutant general on the staff of Gen. Birney; but, in consequence of his broken health, was obliged to resign from the army. After the expulsion of Isabella II. he was appointed U. S. Consul at Trinidad, and held this position until the breaking out of the Cuban revolution, when he resigned, and devoted himself to freeing Cuba from the Spanish rule. He was the leader in the insurrection in the district of Cinco Villas, and, having been commissioned by the republican leaders as major general and commander-in-chief of the army of Cinco Villas, he for a long time carried on a series of successful operations against the Spanish troops, but after the overthrow of the Cuban republic he was captured while endeavoring to escape from the island and executed by the Spanish authorities at Santiago de Cuba, July 16th, aged 39.

Cooke, Mrs. Jay—Wife of the well known banker, and a member of the Allen family, of Kentucky—died of disease of the heart, Oconto, near Philadelphia, Pa., July 22d; aged 43.

Call, Capt. Daniel—Engineer and driver of the Greenleaf White, of the same place, by the capsizing of a boat, near Bath, Me., July 22d.

Hamond, Sir Graham—The celebrated English aeronaut; commenced his career as an aeronaut on June 7th, 1838. In an ascent soon afterwards, at Rochester, Eng., his balloon was driven out to sea, but he was rescued by a passing vessel, and landed at Whitstable. The last descent of Mr. Cocking in a balloon was from the Nassau balloon, in the year 1837, drew Mr. Hampton's attention to this subject, and he constructed one on an improved principle, and first ascended with it from Chelsea Farm on Oct. 3d, 1838. On June 13th, 1839, he ascended from Cremorne Gardens, and subsequently from Mr. Chesse's establishment, at Kensington. On each occasion he descended in his parachute, and received some injury on alighting—England, June 11th, aged 72

Howe, Professor John W. T.—Died of pleuro-pneumonia, N. Y. city, July 21st, aged 49. For particulars see City Summary.

Hubbard, Hon. L. L.D.—Late Associate Judge of Connecticut—born on December 28, 1814, at Kirkhill, near Edinburgh, Scotland; educated at the High school of Edinburgh, having originally designed to pursue the profession of medicine. He, however, was appreciated as an engraver, and received great skill in the art; commenced the study of geography at an early age; mastered the works of the best writers on the subject, and in 1843 published his first work, "Hubbard's Guide for Emigrants," on the appointment of Royal Geographer for Scotland. From this time until his death, he published numerous atlases of general, physical and classical geography, atlases of astronomy, genealogical and various other geographical works, and a Dictionary of Geography and works on the same subject. He was elected member of the principal geographical societies of the world. Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, and in 1866 the University of Edinburgh conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. The valuable maps of the geographical survey of Pennsylvania were executed at Mr. Johnston's establishment, London, Eng., July 11th, aged 67.

Lozada, Manuel—More generally known as the "Tiger of Jalisco," and an independent Mexican chieftain; noted, years gone by, for his systematic method of highway robbery. In 1857 an officer, who had visited Lozado's home in order to arrest him, offered some inducement to his mother to betray the officer soon after, the mountain chieftain cut off his ears, the flame of his hands and soles of his feet, and left his victim to die exposed

BASE BALL.

ATHLETIC vs. FOREST CITY, OF CLEVELAND.

The second game for the championship between the Athletics, of Philadelphia, and the Forest City, of Cleveland, was played on Saturday, the 22d inst., on the Union grounds, Cincinnati. The first game was played in Philadelphia on the 4th of July and resulted in a decisive victory for the Athletics by a score of 29 to 8. Both clubs were in good condition, the Athletics fresh from their triumph over the Keokongas and the Forest City exulting in the decisive defeat they had administered to the Eckfords, of Brooklyn, on the previous day. The attendance was not what was expected, only a thousand persons being present; although the weather was delightful. Mr. Lennon, of the Keokongas, filled the thankless position of umpire in a manner highly satisfactory to both clubs.

The game commenced precisely at 3 o'clock, White, the first striker of the Forest Cities, getting out on a fair fly caught by Radcliff. Allison was speedily taken on a fly foul by Malone, with one hand. Faber, after giving Malone a chance to put him out on a foul, made one base by a "liner" to left field, where he was left by Carleton going out at first base by McBride's assistance. Meantime Outhbert went to first base on called balls, and, stealing around, came home on a wild throw to third by White. McBride was fielded out at first by Pratt. Radcliff, by a magnificent hit to left field, scored Faber, and Malone on an error by Johnson in attempting to put him out at first base by Bass' throw, and Reach flew out to Kimball; seven runs being scored, three earned, and the totals 13 to 6 in favor of the Athletics.

Faber led off in the seventh innings by a long hit to centre fie'd, which Sensenderfer took brilliantly on the fly. Carleton hit in the same direction, but the hit this time was a little too much for Sensenderfer, although he made a splendid effort to secure it, and Pratt went out at first by Reach's assistance, leaving Carleton on the second base. No runs.....Sensenderfer hit to Bass and retired at first base. Meyerle then got in a "corker" to centre field, and made a clean home run. Bechtel was pretty taken on the fly by Bass at short left field, and Cuthbert went out at first base by a good throw of Sutton to Carleton. Totals, 14 to 6 in favor of the Athletics.

In the eighth innings, Sutton and Johnson were put out at first base. Bass took a ball that Bechtel tried to take on the fly, but over-running, Bass, for the second time, made a home run. White's grounder was muffed by Radcliff. Allison was caught on the fly by Reach. One run for the Forest City.....McBride was given his second base on balls, and Sutton made a base hit on Malone's ball to one-base hit to centre field. Radcliff went out at first base, Bass fielding the ball, Fisler was caught on the fly by Kimball, and before Malone could get back, he was also put out, the double play closing the innings for one run—not earned.

In the last inning Pabor and Kimball flew out to Sensenderfer and Cuthbert. Carleton made his first by a wild throw of Radcliff's, and Pratt his by a good hit to left field, and both were sent home by Sutton's splendid three base hit. Johnson brought Sutton in by a good one base hit. Bass made his base by a hot grounder to Meyerle, but was forced out at second by White hitting to Radcliff. Three runs, none earned.....Fisler made two bases by a fair foul hit to left field, and Reach followed with a "liner" to right field, both being brought home by Meyerle's long hit to left field, and on which Leri made a clean home run. Bechtel was retired at first base by a throw of Bass to Carleton and Sensenderfer and Cuthbert flew out to McBride, the inning closings for three runs, all earned.

The game was marked by very heavy batting, the dead ball being hit around in the most lively manner, no less than five clean home runs and three three base hits being made, Meyerle and Bass leading in this department on behalf of their respective clubs. The first base men had most of the work to do on each side, and both played superbly, Fisler without an error, Radcliff and Reach, of the Athletics, and Bass, of the Forest City, lending valuable assistance. The following was the score:—

ATLANTIC vs. STAR.

These clubs played their first game together this season on the Capitoline grounds on Saturday, July 22d, and though the Stars had out their reconstructed nine, which included their former second baseman, Bevins—who has left the Haymakers—and Thake, the fine left fielder of the Brooklyn Athletics, still they had to leave the field a defeated party, the Atlantic nine outfielding and outbatting the champion amateurs from the very start. The Atlantics presented a new nine, Noonan, of the Brooklyn Athletics, making his first appearance in the Atlantic nine; Burdock, too, of the same club, playing as catcher. The Atlantics now have a strong team, and if they will keep their nine in good practice and just as it was placed in this game, they will do well.

The game commenced precisely at 3 o'clock, White, the first striker of the Forest Cities, getting out on a fair fly foul by Malone, with one hand. Faber, after giving Malone a chance to put him out on a foul, made one base by a "liner" to left field, where he was left by Carleton going out at first base by McBride's assistance. Meantime Outhbert went to first base on called balls, and, stealing around, came home on a wild throw to third by White. McBride was fielded out at first by Pratt. Radcliff, by a magnificent hit to left field, scored Faber, and Malone on an error by Johnson in attempting to put him out at first base by Bass' throw, and Reach flew out to Kimball; seven runs being scored, three earned, and the totals 13 to 6 in favor of the Athletics.

Faber led off in the seventh innings by a long hit to centre fie'd, which Sensenderfer took brilliantly on the fly. Carleton hit in the same direction, but the hit this time was a little too much for Sensenderfer, although he made a splendid effort to secure it, and Pratt went out at first by Reach's assistance, leaving Carleton on the second base. No runs.....Sensenderfer hit to Bass and retired at first base. Meyerle then got in a "corker" to centre field, and made a clean home run. Bechtel was pretty taken on the fly by Bass at short left field, and Cuthbert went out at first base by a good throw of Sutton to Carleton. Totals, 14 to 6 in favor of the Athletics.

In the eighth innings, Sutton and Johnson were put out at first base. Bass took a ball that Bechtel tried to take on the fly, but over-running, Bass, for the second time, made a home run. White's grounder was muffed by Radcliff. Allison was caught on the fly by Reach. One run for the Forest City.....McBride was given his second base on balls, and Sutton made a base hit on Malone's ball to one-base hit to centre field. Radcliff went out at first base, Bass fielding the ball, Fisler was caught on the fly by Kimball, and before Malone could get back, he was also put out, the double play closing the innings for one run—not earned.

In the last inning Pabor and Kimball flew out to Sensenderfer and Cuthbert. Carleton made his first by a wild throw of Radcliff's, and Pratt his by a good hit to left field, and both were sent home by Sutton's splendid three base hit. Johnson brought Sutton in by a good one base hit. Bass made his base by a hot grounder to Meyerle, but was forced out at second by White hitting to Radcliff. Three runs, none earned.....Fisler made two bases by a fair foul hit to left field, and Reach followed with a "liner" to right field, both being brought home by Meyerle's long hit to left field, and on which Leri made a clean home run. Bechtel was retired at first base by a throw of Bass to Carleton and Sensenderfer and Cuthbert flew out to McBride, the inning closings for three runs, all earned.

The game was marked by very heavy batting, the dead ball being hit around in the most lively manner, no less than five clean home runs and three three base hits being made, Meyerle and Bass leading in this department on behalf of their respective clubs. The first base men had most of the work to do on each side, and both played superbly, Fisler without an error, Radcliff and Reach, of the Athletics, and Bass, of the Forest City, lending valuable assistance. The following was the score:—

ATHLETIC vs. KEKIONGA.

The Athletics, of Philadelphia, arrived in Fort Wayne, Ind., on the afternoon of the 20th inst., and played their return game of the championship series with the Kekiongas. The weather was cool and cloudy, making it very favorable for playing, but the attendance was small, only five hundred persons being present. Lennon, the catcher of the Kekiongas, having a sore hand, was unable to take part in this game, and filled instead the position of umpire with great impartiality. Henbel, of the Athletics, was also unable to play, and Rechtel took his place. Game commenced at 3.30, with the Kekiongas at the bat, and they were retired without adding to the score, the Athletics in the same innings adding four runs, a couple of errors by Kohler and Foran alone preventing blanks. In the third innings Williams and Mathews made safe one-base hits, and Goldsmith brought both home by a fine hit to centre field, which Sensenderfer let slip by him. In the third innings a single error by Goldsmith, after two men were out, alowed the Athletics to score five runs of the eight made in that innings. In the next three innings the Athletics were whitewashed in one, two, three order, the Kekiongas in the sixth getting five runs, all earned. Foran, Goldsmith and Dean leading off with safe one-base hits, and Carey brought all three home and made two bases by a fine hit to left. In the last three innings the Athletics got the hang of Mathews' pitching and punished him for fourteen runs, all but two of which were earned. The Kekiongas being whitewashed in the last three innings, left the victory with the Athletics by the score of 26 to 7. The game was finely played by both clubs, but four errors marking the play. Cuthbert, Radcliff and Fisler excelled in fielding for the Athletics, and Dean and Williams on behalf of the Kekiongas. The score was as follows:—

AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP OF JERSEY.

RESOLUTE vs. CHAMPION.

On Friday, July 21st, the Resolute Club, of Elizabeth, visited Jersey City to play a game with the Champion, of Jersey City, for the championship of New Jersey, and as these clubs had not met on the field since 1869, considerable interest was excited in regard to the issue of the contest. Both clubs were out in their strength, and the grounds being free, were visited by a crowd of spectators, numbering fully 2,000 people, and excellent order and a fair field were secured through the services of an efficient corps of the Jersey City police.

The Resolutes presented their reconstructed nine, which includes that effective little pitcher Sammy Collins, and that fine player Austin, both of the old Union nine of Morrisania. The Champions also had out a strong nine, with the exception of their players at short stop and second base. The two clubs, however, failed to secure the services of an umpire posted in the new rules of the game, though the one who served did his best to be impartial. The best way in such important contests is to select an umpire who is well known as an experienced man, in the position. Under the circumstances of the efforts committed, the two clubs behaved very creditably indeed, the decisions being quietly acquiesced in on both sides.

PLAY.

Play was called at 3:43 P. M., with the Champions at the bat. Clark opened play by walking to his base on called balls, and getting rounded by Green's first base hit, he came home on H. Campbell's bad throw. Green proceeding to third on the play, and Wyks' poor hit to Brown, Willis having a narrow escape from a double play. Austin and Mike Campbell then disposed of the next two strikers by quiet fouls, the former by a fly ball, the innings closing with one run.....Laing, of the Resolutes, then led off with a safe one base hit, Romer following with a fly ball, which was prettily caught; Austin then hit to left field for two bases, and before the ball was put out he came in on a passed ball; the next two strikers being victims of Clark, Schenck fielding out one of them. This left the totals at 1 to 1.

In the second innings, after Wyks had fouled out, Romer made his base by a good hit, and as Helmer hit for four bases two runs were scored. Clark was afterwards retired by the two Campbells and Willis, by a peculiar catch of Forsyth's, who caught the ball from Brown's hands.....Brown opened with a high ball to Wyks and retired, after which Hugh Campbell and Collins took their bases on cut-ed balls, and, assisted by Brown's terrific hitting, scored their runs, the other two outs being from a pretty catch by Green, and a good one by Wyks. Score still even, 3 to 3, with the promise of a close contest.

In the third innings the Champions were handsomely whitewashed, Collins fielding out Black, Brown making a pretty catch from Schenck's bat, and Forsyth a beauty on the run close to the ground, the best catch of the day.....Austin and Forsyth opened play with safe hits, the former getting round home, but Forsyth was neatly put out at second by a good throw of Helmer's to Romer, and afterwards Wyks and Helmer put the other two out by fine catches. This gave the lead to the Resolutes, by a score of 4 to 3, and the Champion crowd became quieter in their applause. In the fourth innings neither side scored; Clark, Green and Helmer, retiring the Resolutes easily, and the Campbells and Forsyth doing the same for the Champions, Mike making a good foul bound catch. This still left the Resolutes in the van, and their stock began to find favor in the market.

In the fifth innings, by an error of Laing's and a passed ball, one run was secured, while on the other side, though five of the Resolutes went to the bat, not a run was scored, Green putting the side out handsomely; his short fielding being a feature of the Champion play. This again placed the figures equal, 4 to 4. Then for the contest had been marked by good fielding on both sides, with few errors on either side.

In the sixth innings, by the good hits made by Romer and Green two runs were scored, two bad throws also assisting, Mike Campbell making two fine catches in this innings, and Laing a good one.....The Resolutes, by the two good hits made by H. Campbell and Farrow and good base running, secured a run, Romer, Green and Schenck putting the side out by good fielding. By this score the Champions were placed in the van by the totals of 6 to 5, and Jersey City men rejoiced threat; still it was anybody's game, and the play was watched by all present with increasing interest.

In the seventh innings Brown and Wyks batted safely for bases, and, also assisted by wild balls—Mike Campbell not being able to back up Collins' pitching as well as Farrow—the Champions gained another run, thereby still further strengthening their position, the totals now standing at 7 to 5 in their favor..... Laing opened with a good hit, but, by the sharp fielding of Brown, Schenck and Romer, the side was retired before a run could be scored.

The Champions now began to feel confident, and at the close of the eighth innings victory looked sure for Jersey City. In this innings the Champions added to their home runs Wyks, Austin and Brown all scoring base hits. Brown, H. Campbell and Farrow finally putting the side out, Willis having a life given him at first base by the umpire.....On the other side, an error by Schenck and a wild pitch gave the Resolutes a run, which left the totals at 9 to 6 in favor of the champions, and Frank Wood in a fever of exultation.

The ninth innings was now commenced amidst considerable excitement. The Champions were handsomely whitewashed by the fine play of Brown and a good catch by Stevens, leaving the score still at 10 to 6.....The Resolutes now went in to recover their lost ground, and being assisted by important errors and making two good hits, the former of which proved to secure 4 runs before they were out, thereby escaping defeat in this innings. An important error by the umpire, in judging a foul ball from H. Campbell's bat, probably saved the Champions from defeat. The excitement now was red hot, but order was preserved.

In the tenth innings, by heavy batting, the Champions were enabled to add five to their score..... When the Resolutes went to the bat they had a hard row to hoe to win, having to get six runs. They went in pluckily, however, and one time it looked as if there would be another tie game; but after they had scored three runs. Green ended the game with a throw to Clark, and Frank Wood was happy as he recorded the game as won, by a score of 15 to 13. The following is the full score of the match:—

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

ENGAGED.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

BY EDWIN V. BARR.

I know two eyes of azure blue,
Two eyes I love to see,
Because to one I know they're true,
Though roguish they may be;
Two pouting lips my own have met,
As we sat side by side;
Methinks I feel their pressure yet,
As past thoughts by me glide.

Two snowy arms around my neck
Have lovingly been thrown,
While a cheek so soft, without a speck,
Reclined against my own;
Two willing ears have heard some words—
Their import you can guess;
But the answer to those whispered words
Was sweet to me—'twas "Yes."

DIVORCED IN THE DESERT.

One of the pioneers in California emigration, who went across the Plains in '49, tells this story, that began on the journey and has just ended in San Francisco:—

While the train, of which the narrator, now in Nevada, was a member, was encamped at a point on the Humboldt where the Lassen trail intersects the Carson track of travel, he visited the tent of a family consisting of an elderly couple and one child, a daughter of fourteen or fifteen. The old lady was sitting on a pile of blanke's under the canvas, encouraging a most determi ed attack of the "sulks," while the masculine head of affairs had planted himself on the wooden tongue, and was sucking his pipe as though he expected to remain there forever. A single glance developed the difficulty in that l tle train of one wagon and three persons, and that it had attained a point of quiet desperation beyond the reach of peaceful adjustment, for the fourth day after they had pitched their tent at the forks there they had parted company. They had found that they could not agree upon the route by which to enter California there they had remained. The husband had expressed a preference for the Carson road, and the wife for the Lassen, and neither would yield. The wife declared she would remain all winter; the husband said he would be pleased to prolong the sojourn through the summer following.

On he morning of the fourth day the wife broke a sullen silence by proposing a division of the property, which consisted of two yoke of oxen, one wagon, camp furniture, a small quantity of provisions and twelve dollars in silver. The proposition was accepted, and forthwith the "plunder" was stretched, leaving the wagon to the old man and the daughter to the mother. The latter exchanged with a neighboring train the cattle belonging to her for a pony and pack-saddle, and, piling her daughter and her portion of the divided spoils upon the animal, she resolutely started across the desert by the Lassen trail, while the old man silently yoked his cattle and took the other route. Of course both parties reached California in safety. We say "of course," for it is scarcely possible that any obstacle, death included, could have interfered with stubbornness so sublime. Arriving in Sacramento with her daughter, the old lady readily found employment— or women were less plentiful then than now—and subsequently opened a boarding-house and in a few years ssed a handsome fortune. Two years ago she went an Francisco, and the daughter, whose education had been neglected, was married to one of the most substantial citizens.

And what has become of the old man? The wife had been nor heard of him since they parted on the Humboldt. They had lived happily together for years, and she ctimes reproached herself for the wilfulness that arated them after so long a pilgrimage together. But was not dead. We cannot trace his course in California, however. All we know of him is that fortune had not smiled upon him, and that for years he had toiled without hope. Finally, feeling unable longer to wield the pick and shovel, he visited San Francisco in the hope of obtaining employment better adopted to his wasted strength,

For three months he remained idle after arriving there, and then, for want of occupation, became the humble retailer of peanuts and oranges, with his entire traffic upon his arm. This was six months ago. A few weeks since, in passing the open door of a cottage in the southern part of the city, he observed a lady in the hall and stopped to offer his merchandise. As he stepped upon the threshold the lady approached and the old man raised his eyes and dropped his basket; and no wonder, either, for she was his wife—his "old woman!" She recognized him, and, throwing her arms in amazement, exclaimed:—

"Great God! John, is that you?"

"All that is left of me," responded the old man.

With extended arms they approached. Suddenly the old lady's countenance changed and she stepped back. "John," said she, with a look that might have been construed into earnestness, "how did you find the Carson road?"

"Miserable, Sukey, miserable," replied the old man; "full of sand and alkali."

"Then I was right, John!" she continued, inquiringly.

"You were, Sukey."

"That's enough," said she, throwing her arms around the old man's neck—"that's enough, John."

And the old couple, strangely sundered, were re-united.

THE WHOLE ART OF KISSING.

People will kiss, yet not one in a hundred know how to extract bliss from lovely lips, no more than they know how to make diamonds from charcoal. And yet it is easy! This little item is not alone for young beginners, but for the many who go at it like hunting coons or shelling corn. First know whom you are to kiss. Don't make a mistake, although mistakes may be good. Don't jump up like a trout for a fly, and smack a woman on the neck, or on the end of the nose, when you mean for waterfall or bonnet ribbon, in haste to get through. The sentiment should be a little the tallest. He should have a clean face, a kind eye and a mouth full of expression instead of tobacco. Don't kiss everything, including nasty little dogs, male or female. Don't sit down to it. Stand up. Need not be anxious to get in a crowd. Two persons are plenty for one and catch a kiss. More persons spoil the sport. Stand firm. It won't hurt any after you get used to it. Take the left hand of the lady in your right hand. Let your hat go to—any place out of the way. Throw the left hand gently over the shoulder of the lady, and let the hand fall down upon the right side, toward the belt. Don't be in a hurry. Draw her gently to your loving heart. Her head will fall lightly upon your shoulder, and a handsome one it is, by the way it makes! Don't be in a hurry. Send a little life down your left arm, and let it know its business. Her left hand is in your right. Let there be an expression to that—not like the grip of a vice, but a gentle clasp, full of electricity, thought and respect. Don't be in a hurry; her head lies carelessly on your shoulder! You are nearly heart to heart! Look down into her half closed eye! Gently, yet manfully, press her to your bosom. Stand firm and Providence will give you strength for the ordeal. Be brave, but do not be in a hurry. Her lips almost open! Lean lightly forward with your head, not the body. Take good aim. The lips meet—the eyes close—the heart opens—the soul sends the storm, trouble and sorrow of life (don't be in a hurry)—heaven opens before, the world shoots from under your feet as a meteor flashes across the evening sky (don't be afraid), the curves rise before the just created altar of love as zephyrs dance with the dew drops on the morn, the heart forgets its bitterness—and the art of kissing is learned. No noise, no fuss, no fluttering and squirming like a hook-impaled worm. Kissing don't hurt; and it don't require a brass to make it legal. Don't jab down on a beautiful mouth as if spearing frogs! Do not muss her hair, scratch down her collar, bite her cheek, squize her rich ribbons and leave her mussed, rumpled and dumnuxed! Don't grab and yank the lady as if she were a struggling colt.

A FIENDISH OUTRAGE FRUSTRATED.—Thomas McNulty was arrested last evening in Charlestown for an attempted rape upon Mary Eilen, a daughter of John McSweeney, aged only nine years. The story, as it now appears in vious to the judicial examination, is this:—McNulty, who is a man of thirty-five years, having a wife and children, formerly lived in the house with McSweeney, and yesterday, in the absence of the rest of the family, went into the house where the little girl was, and after a moment of conversation took the child in his arms, threw her upon the sofa, uncovered her person and his own, and was about to commit the most horrible crime to which man's passion can prompt him, when he heard some one approaching. He of course became alarmed and desisted, begging the girl not to tell her mother. It seems that she had more than ordinary sense for one of her years, however, and she stoutly averred that she would inform her mother, which she immediately did in the presence of her bestial assailant. Mrs. McSweeney was so enraged that, being a stout, powerful woman, she knocked McNulty down, then rushed for a knife and followed the cowardly, fleeing scoundrel into the street with the purpose of taking righteous vengeance without the law's delay. Failing to overtake him, she had a warrant issued and he was arrested, and for the time being he is out of the reach of mob law. If this version of the case is substantiated at the examination, the direst penalty of the law will fall of being too severe for McNulty.—Boston Herald, July 14th.

CONSUMMATE.—The case of Warren against Margaret J. Hubert, alias Wood, and John R. Stevens was up in the Supreme Court, this city, on July 14th. Plaintiff states that in September last he took defendant as housekeeper, and furnished her rooms as such, and that about two weeks ago he discovered that the furniture had been mortgaged to Stevens. Defendant states that in September last plaintiff took her as his mistress and furnished her rooms for her as such, the furniture being his free gift to her; that they lived happily together until about two weeks ago, when plaintiff became inordinately jealous of defendant and "put up this job on her." She says that the chattel mortgage was made out on the furniture at plaintiff's suggestion, to anticipate a suit for a dry goods debt that was pending against defendant in the Marine Court. The case came up on the 14th inst., on a motion to continue an injunction against the sale of the property under mortgage. The motion was granted.—N. Y. Star, July 18th.

BIRCH ENOUGH FOR A LITTELL WOMAN.—George Birchenough, of Paterson, under promise of marrying her sometime, lived with Martha Littell six years. George liked his beer, and a Mrs. Smith kept a saloon in North Main street. Recently, Mr. Smith died, and three weeks afterward Mrs. Smith consoled herself by marrying Birchenough. Martha Littell thought this was her business, and she hauled her George over the coals in such a manner that he had her arrested on the 20th instant, as a disorderly person. She was taken before the Recorder, and, confronting Birchenough, her anger arose to such a pitch that she pulled a brick from her pocket and let it land on Birchenough's head. He staggered, but his head being as hard as his heart, he was not seriously hurt. It was the law of the land, but not justice to wronged humanity, that Martha Littell should be committed to the county jail on a charge of assault and battery.

A PUZZLER.—A singular case has just come to light in Hartford, Conn. A gentleman of that city who died lately leaving a handsome property and a childless widow, but with a prospect for the future, left also a will, duly executed, in which it was provided that, if the expected child proved to be a boy two thirds of the property should go to him and one-third to the widowed mother. If, however, the child proved to be a girl, only one-third of the estate was to go to her and two-thirds to the mother. But the departed had "builded better than he knew," and the widow has become the mother of twins! And, what greatly heightens the perplexity of the case, the twins are a boy and a girl; and the lawyers are in a quandary to know what they shall do about it.

CALLING HARD NAMES.—The Times, of India, gives the following interesting but jaw-tying intelligence:—"We are very glad to learn that the marriage of Mr. Rughoonath Mudhoosudun Mullick, a Hindu merchant, of Bombay, with Dhuncoorbai, the daughter of Sheth Gudhurdas Mahuneas, and the widow of Luchmichand Dhurmusey, was celebrated at Chinchpogly. There was a large number of influential and educated Hindus and parsees present and a few Europeans. The bride is 21 years old and well connected. This is the first widow marriage among the Kupole Bunias, of Bombay." As hitherto the widows have been burned, it is for them at least decidedly a change for the better.

A CULLUD CUB.—A colored man, named Charles Hammond, of Darke county, O., says a telegram to the N. Y. Tribune, dated July 16th, committed an outrage on a young woman on Saturday, for which he was arrested and lodged in jail. It has since been discovered that he had made improper advances to two young girls near Union City, aged 13 and 16, respectively, while the girls were gathering blackberries, and, overpowering the younger, was only prevented from carrying out his designs by her youth. Intense excitement prevails at Greenville, where he is imprisoned, and it is generally believed that he will be lynched.

A SCHOOLMASTER in Binghamton, N. Y., has been fined $1,700 for circulating a copy of verses found upon the floor of his school-room, in which the character of a lady in the neighborhood was maligned. The action was brought under the new law, making it an offence to impute a want of chastity to a woman; and it is said that some members of the jury were in favor of placing the damages at $10,000. The writer of the verses is now to be proceeded against.

THE OPERA IN LONDON, ENG.

The following are the comments upon the operatic performances at the Royal Italian Opera Covent Garden, and Her Majesty's Opera, Drury Lane Theatre, London, Eng., crowded out of our past issue, as therein stated:—

"It is a quarter of a century since Covent Garden was opened as a second Italian opera house, but the amateurs who were present at the first performance therein of Rossini's 'Semiramide,' on the 10th of April, 1847, will never forget the ensemble of that evening. Nor is it probable that the operas of that memorable year will ever again be equalled in excellence of execution. The musical director and conductor, who was the Atlas of the undertaking, had an acting manager to deal with who was a musician, the late Mr. Frederick Beale, who warmly sympathized with the feelings for art of the originators of the undertaking, and he cordially co-operated with Mr. Costa (now Sir Michael) to secure such an interpretation of the lyric drama as had never before been heard in this country. The late Giulia Grisi was then in her prime, and her Semiramide was one of her grandest impersonations. Madame Alboni, when she stepped on the boards and sang a few bars of the music of Arsace, at once was made famous. Signor Tamburini, who still lives, was in full possession of his powers of florid execution, which made the Assur memorable. Bands, chorus, principals were strengthened by a gorgeous mise-en-scene the stage business of which was under Sir Michael Costa's immediate superintendence. It was not therefore without misgiving that old opera-goers went to hear 'Semiramide' revived at Drury Lane Theatre on the 24th ult.; but, on the whole, the representation was a very fine one indeed, from the musical point of view; as regards the mise en-scene, the resources of the theatre did not admit of an accurate Babylonian illustration. The cast good principals fell short of the Italian delineators of it. The principals now are a German, a Frenchwoman, an Englishman and an American, and the accent of the sweet southern tongue could not be precisely Pascan. The choruses, although inferior in numbers to that of 1847, left nothing to be desired in the brilliant manner of their accompaniments. The choralists have, perhaps, been more habituated to Verdi than to Rossini, and even the chief vocalists, except Madame Trebelli, Signor Agnesi, the Fraser and Lassig, were not specially happy in conquering the Rossinian divisions. On the other hand, the grandeur of the voice of Madame Tietjens, her imposing presence and energetic acting render her Semiramide second only to the impressions of Pasta and Grisi, to whom she is the legitimate successor. The duets between her and Madame Trebelli, the 'Serbami Ognor' and the 'Ebben a Te Ferisci,' were remarkably well sung, the 'Giorno D'Orrore' in the latter, up to the unusual excellence of Tietjens was re-called after the cavatina, 'Belreggi,' and the same compliment was extended to Madame Trebelli-Bettini for her excellent delivery of the aria d'entrata of Arsace, 'Ah! Quel Giorno.' Signor Agnesi had not only a large share of the evening's honors in the duet, 'Bella Immago,' but throughout the opera took the difficult runs assigned to the bass with consummate skill. Seeing that this school of singing is almost extinct, his excellent execution of the florid directions was the more surprising and praiseworthy. Mr. Bentham is much in the same category of many artists who essay the music of Idreno, in the cantabile he was steady, but in the roulades he was precarious. The Oroe of Signor Foli, with his fine voice, was of good account, especially in the 'Serenade,' thanks to its careful execution. The music altogether created an impression on the auditory, which seemed struck with the freshness of the melodious imagery, the grandeur of the choral combinations the rich and gorgeous harmonies, the picturesque points of orchestration which abound in the masterpiece. Nothing more vivid than the music accompanying the appearance of the apparition of the poisoned Nino is not to be found in any work. 'Semiramide' dates from 1825—the 'Barbiere' from 1816—but it was his farewell opera for the Italian stage, his subsequent career being in France, where he ended with another masterpiece—William Tell'—in 1829. It was at the Fenice in Venice that 'Semiramide' was produced, for the first time, Madame Dorus Gras, then being the Queen; Madame Moriami, Arsace; Signor Galli, Assur; Signor Moriami, Oroe; and our countryman, Sinclair—of 'Pray Goody' fame, Apollo's bravura air in 'Midas'—being Idreno. The introduction of a military band gives an effective and highly electrified the Venetians, as indeed it seems to do at Drury Lane; but the Italians could not, on the whole, appreciate the advanced style of Rossini, who has foreshadowed the 'William Tell' in form and treatment in his 'Semiramide.' This is scarcely to be wondered on the last stage of transformation his genius underwent. There is an Oriental type in the Assyrian music which, perhaps, puzzled the Venetians, who must have been quite as much bewildered by the originality of the rhythms in the score. 'La Sonnambula,' with Mdlle. Marimon and Mr. Capoul, was performed on June 26th, 'La Figlia del Reggimento' the 29th, and a repetition of "Semiramide" on July 1st..... At the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, Verdi's 'Un Ballo in Maschera' was produced June 27th for the first time this season. The Sunday Times comments upon the performance as follows:— Its revival was a surprise to those who remember the 'faint praise' awarded to it on all hands when first the opera challenged public criticism. There is especially to those who had occasion to study the music and to estimate its worth under a sense of responsible duty. Why 'Esmeralda' was not allowed quietly to slumber in the limbo of forgotten things we cannot pretend to know, though possibly some may see a reason in the fact that it affords Madame Patti an opportunity of singing a lot of cadenzas music and of appearing in a showy dress. However that the opera has again been heard, and again it has convinced amateurs of its intrinsic worth, is a fact which has no legitimate claims, is very small indeed. Of course, an interest attaches to the story, and will continue to do so while the novel upon which it is based remains popular. Of course, also, the elaborate mise-en-scene at Covent Garden has its attractions and the singing and acting of Mme. Patti would go far to recommend even a less meritorious production. These things may keep 'Esmeralda' before the public on a while, but of its ultimate fate no doubt whatever can exist. Tuesday's performance was in the whole a good one. Patti seemed chiefly excited by Madame Patti, whose impersonation of the hapless heroine displayed all the marked features which obtained such unqualified recognition last season. The extremes of human feeling are touched by a chanteuse merrily inclined, and forthwith the vulgar passing on her way to an untimely and shameful death. But Madame Patti, as everybody knows can atune herself to whatever situation may arise, and her singing in the concluding scene—which springs from the entire absorption of the artist in the character—Madame Patti is always conscious of herself—but, at any rate with a more intelligent approach to truth in her delineation. The absence of strong dramatic genius. Hence the progress of Esmeralda's fortunes was watched with growing interest, and the denouement anticipated with perfect sympathy. Of Madame Patti's singing it can hardly be necessary to speak. Enough that the Italian artist sang in her best manner, had to repeat her more prominent efforts, and was applauded throughout the opera with great persistence. Signor Medini again exerted himself with effect as the Archer Captain, and Signor Antonucci made more for himself as 'Don Salanie e Capiano'—one of the best numbers in the work. Signor Graziani as Claudio lacked nothing of intense earnestness, while the Esmeralda of Madame Scalchi as effectively repeated character as could be desired. The minor parts were sustained with more or less success, and the general ensemble at least equalled that of last season's performances." "Dinorah" was sung on June 29th, "Les Huguenots," with Signor Mongini, Aimé, for the last time, was given on the 30th, and "Hamlet," with Mdlle Nessi as Ophelia, and M. Favre as the Danish Prince, was performed on July 1st. Signor Morio was announced to take his farewell of the lyric stage on the occasion of his benefit, on July 19th.

THE HANDEL FESTIVAL.

Concerning the performances of the concluding day of the Handel Festival, in London, the Sunday Times publishes the following:—

"Need the reasons be set forth why the third day of the Handel Festival, on which, 'Israel in Egypt,' is always performed, has come to be 'the great day of the feast?' In the very nature of things choral displays at the Crystal Palace are more effective than solos, and when the work is brought forward are the stupendous series of tone picture a illustrative of the Mosaic history. Of the triumph of Israel, an attraction is provided which few amateurs can resist. So, on Friday afternoon, 23,000 people flocked to the Crystal Palace, filling the ample spaces of the nave and transepts and the whole of the orchestral area. Contrast with an eagerly excited public crowd. The huge choir was, of course, arranged as a double chorus, and unusual animation seemed to prevail among the serried mass, as though each member felt that the occasion was one of certain triumph. So, indeed, it proved, for at no previous festival has 'Israel' been more finely rendered, or with more uniform success. In the opening chorus the splendid passage on the words, 'And their cry came up unto God,' was the first great 'sensation' of the performance. After Thou didst blow with the wind, with wonderful closeness and clearness was the expressive fugue, 'They Loathed to Drink of the River' given out, its character again picturing in forcible colors the disgust of the Egyptians at the change made in their favorite stream. Even more striking, because more directly suggestive, were the passages in 'He Spake the word,' which bring before the mental vision the swarms of flies and the hordes of locusts sent forth to devastate the offending land, to shout in triumph, however, that the climax of tone painting was reached in 'He Gave them Hailstones,' were it not for what has yet to come. Certainly we can conceive no 'storm music' more overwhelming than that which on Friday was heard in the rapt silence by no ordinary assent. Such a performance of such strains indeed illustrated 'music's magic power;' specially did it illustrate the power able to call forth enthusiasm. The audience applauded as one man and continued applauding till Sir Michael Costa gave the competition. Now, after this, the awful solemnity of 'He Sent a Thick Darkness was heightened by contrast need not be said, but due notice must be taken of the able manner in which the recitative phrases were enunciated by the large body of voices. The well-accustomed effect was made in 'But as for His People'—an effect arising from the juxta-position of massive harmonies and exultant strains, with the tender pastoral subject on the words 'He Led Them Forth Like Sheep.' Other and not less striking impressions were made in 'He Rebuked the Red Sea,' with its fine contrasts, in the elaborate and difficult 'Led Them Through the Deep,' and still more emphatically in 'But the Waters Overwhelmed,' which seemed to bring before one's eyes the rage and turmoil of the avenging flood. With the interest of the first part ended, and we need only add that Madame Patty sang in one air 'Their Land Brought Forth Frogs,' in admirable style. The second part, like its predecessor, was nothing but a catalogue of successes from 'The Horse and His Rider,' at the beginning, to 'The Horse and His Rider' at the end. The magnificent repeated chorus—the very embodiment of triumph—was again one of the chief features of the performance; as was, for equally good reasons, the impressive picture on the words, 'The depths have covered them, they sank into the bottom as a stone.' The utmost force and joy of 'Thy right hand, O Lord,' found striking utterance; but the next overwhelming effect was produced in 'And with the Blast of Thy Nostrils'—a gigantic inspiration such as could only have come to the giant Handel. Every reader must have in mind the passages which represent the walls of water and the congealing of the depths in 'The heart of the Sea.' Let him imagine these given out by such an orchestra as that of Friday and some faint notion can be got of the impression they made. So the stately oratorio marched on, successively depicting the fate of the inhabitants of Canaan, and the jubilation which again proclaims that the Deliverer of Israel hath 'triumphed gloriously.' Never, we may safely declare, has Israel in Egypt received a more impressive rendering, or the genius of Handel had a more glorious vindication. The solos were all well executed, Madame Rudersdorf earning great applause in 'Thou Didst Blow with the Wind,' and dividing with Madame Sherrington the honors accruing from 'Thou in Thy Mercy.' Madame Patey was the social advantage in 'Thou Shalt Bring Them In,' which well suits her fine voice and style. Mr. Sims Reeves excited a tempest of applause by his rendering of 'The Enemy Said,' and Messrs. Santley and Foli had to repeat a capital duet in the 'Lord is a Man of War.'" With regard to the attendance at this festival, we excerpt the following from the Athenæum:—"The attendance at the Festival of 1871 has been the largest, and the numbers being 84,968 as against the former maximum of 82,465 (1868), and the minimum 59,434 (1865)."

A MERRY FUNERAL.—One of the most curious wills ever made was by an Englishman, at Montgaillard, in 1822, thus quoted in Once a Week:—"It is my will that any one of my relations who shall presume to shed tears at my funeral shall be disinherited. He, on the other hand, who laughs the most heartily shall be sole heir. I order that neither the church nor my hearse shall be hung with black cloth, but that on the day of my burial, the hearse and church shall be decorated with flowers and green boughs. Instead of the tolling of bells I will have drums, fiddles and fifes. All music ans of Montgaillard and its environs shall attend the funeral. Fifty of them shall open the procession with hunting tunes, waltzes and minuets."

BOWLING IN CANADA.—The return match between "Ireland" and "Canada" took place at Dan Black's Bowling Green, James street, Hamilton, Ont., on July 8th. Much interest was taken in this game, as the first had resulted in favor of the Canadians, but little time in Irishmen were too much for them, as will be seen by the following score:

THE SABRE CLUB.—An invitation has been extended for twenty members of this Savannah, Ga., club to visit New York during the month of September, and contend at the head and ring with an organization composed of ex-officers and soldiers of the United States army. The Sabre Club is composed of horsemen who fought in the Confederate ranks during the late war. We believe exBrig. Gen. General Stoughton is at the head of the organization which will contend with the Southerners, and the invitation was sent to General Joseph E. Johnson, president of the Sabres.

I cum in about eleben and went a lemonadin' de rooms wid Dandy Squash and Sally Frisky on my arms, and Tenor de Garmo wouldn't help complimentin' us about de magnificent 'pearance we cut upon de flo'.

INT.—The flow of soul, I suppose, you are talking about.

BONES.—No; it was rader a flow of ice, and de way de champagne flow'd was a caution to old ball gibbers. Well, we went lemonadin' about de rooms—

INT.—I thought you were just now talking about champagning. "Promenading" is the proper word—mean'ering with your favored fair to the mellifluous strains of dulcet music.

BONES.—Well, yes; de musicians did strain demselves considerable, but dere wasn't one dull set on de programme. Virginny reels, and French reels, and all dat.

INT.—I have heard of Virginia reels, but French reels—what may those be?

BONES.—Why, de French reels is de reels dat comes after de shampain, you know, when a feller's head goes round like a top, and he goes off spinning street yarn.

INT.—That, as you might say, is where the reel pain comes in.

BONES.—Yes; and den de music struck up, and de fust ting on de pepper gram was a quadrocne.

INT.—A quadrille, you mean.

BONES.—Well, den, a squadrille, but it wasn't at all like de squad drills of de glorious old Ninth. Of course we dance de Lancers—a dance dat is known all troo de ken' sirs. And it was fun to see us all balancein and chassey-in, and goin de grand rounds, and clankin our chains.

INT.—Clanking your chains? What have chains to do with a ball room?

BONES.—What dey to do? Why, ain't dere de ladies' chain, and de chaine de dames, and de English chain, and de Gran' chain, and de watch chain, and all dem? Den dey pipe up de Hilarious waltz—

INT.—The Cellarius.

BONES.—Well, de Hillery-us; and we all got tight and dance de Man Wid de Poker—

INT.—Referring to the polka, of course.

BONES.—And den we all breakdown, and kick up a shindy and make a grand jamboree, and de waiters they got in de muss and work for each oder's chignons, and de policemen dey come in and requested us to Walk Around, and when de master of solemnities call out de German, dey made us all walk Spanish instead, and several of us got a lay out dat night. It was de most splendid ball I ever went to, and de supper was splendid, and de grand rounds, and clankin our chains.

INT.—Well, I guess we have had enough of your yarn, so Sims Reeves had better give us his latest ballad:—

A MERRY LIFE

Merrily, comrades, quaff and sing,
Strike the guitar while time doth fly;
Life is a lot for clown or king,
Lit by the smile of a woman's eye.

Then the purple vintage gleam
In our beakers foaming high;
Every face is a picture fair,
A meteor gleam from a starlit sky.

Troubadours their triumphs sing,
Fly sly arts to charm the ear.
Never a note but its echoes bring
An answering thrill in some rose-tipped dear.

Roses bud and jasmines bloom,
But beauty's cheek hath richer stain.
And sweeter far is the choice perfume
That ever upon her lips doth reign.

Behold how yonder swan doth float,
Sonorously his plumage as ever he glides;
Such is the neck of my love so pale,
When hung with the jewels that deck a bride.

Merrily, boatman, ply the oar;
Our barge so gayly floats along;
Flowers peep out from the scented shore,
While joy binds vert in mirth and song.

THE BELLE OF NEWPORT.

Last summer, while at Newport,
A rusticating there,
I met a little charmer,
The Belle of the Fair;
The first time I beheld her
In love with her I fell,
For I lost my heart, that's certain,
To the Belle of Newport belle.

Spoken—I tell you, boys, she was a humming bird; such eyes, such hair, a fellow couldn't help but—"You know how it is yourself."

Chorus—She's so lively and so pretty—(Break)
Oh, golly ain't she saucy;
I feel so very, very queer;
Why, I can not tell,
Unless it is I am in love
With that handsome Newport belle.

I asked her if, one evening,
With me she'd take a ride
Behind my team, a four-in-hand,
And if she'd be my bride.
She said she'd ask her dear papa,
But really I can't tell
The cruel answer that she gave,
To this dashing Newport belle.

Spoken—Yes, I asked her if she'd be Mrs C——, she asked her pa; he said so; I told him I had lots of 7.30's; that brought him, you bet.

Chorus—She's so lively, &c.

Now I'm as happy as can be,
Of course I will confess
That when I asked the second time,
What did she say but yes.
She said she had been joking,
That I was not the one,
I believe she was the little flirt,
That stunnin' New port belle.

Spoken—She was the prettiest young lady I ever saw, but I was sacred on her, you know, that song made a difference, though.

Chorus—She's so lively, &c.

THE CIRCUS THIRTY YEARS AGO.

Appended is a circus announcement of an entertainment given at Kittanning, Pennsylvania, in the year 1841. It may not be without interest for the readers of this department of the CLIPPER. It is contributed by Charles Taylor, of Kittanning:—

ALBANY AMPHITHEATRE, OR GREAT WESTERN CIRCUS.

A Splendid and Combined Attraction of Equestrian and Gymnastic Performances.

MR S. H. NICHOLLS, proprietor of the above-named establishment, has the honor to announce to the citizens of Kittanning and his unequalled Troupe of Equestrians, and beautiful Stud of Horses, will be exhibited on Monday, the 13th day of October, for one day only.

The public are also respectfully informed that the Equestrian Troupe, under the direction of Mr. Neechams, is composed of the most extensive and talented Equestrian Artists, comprising several of the most Celebrated Performers, both of this country and Europe, among whom is the unrivaled Le Tort, whose wonderful performances and daring feats of Horsemanship have caused so much excitement in the principal cities of America where he has had the honor to appear.

The manager pledges himself that his exhibition shall be of a strictly chaste and moral character, and free from every objection frequently made to entertainments of this description.

Attached to the company are a number of elegant and accomplished ladies, who will appear during the performance, and, by their graceful and rich acquirements in the profession, will ever add brilliancy of feature to the entire entertainment.

The above establishment during the last winter, at the new Amphitheatre, Albany, as well as at the numerous cities and villages it has visited, and before the most choice and intelligent public where it has had the honor to appear, has always been favored with that degree of propriety and decorum which has established for it a reputation in the minds of a generous public which will warrant the proprietor a patronage equal to its merits.

A celebrated Band is engaged who will accompany the performances with a choice selection of the most popular and appropriate airs, &c.

Doors open at half-past one o'clock. Performance to commence at two. Price of admission:—Box, 50c.; Pit, 25c.

C. GRISWOLD, Agent.

A VERSATILE ACTOR.

Sheridan told several stories of Charles Kean, then at the height of his fame. Some one made Kean a present of a fine horse, on which he was prancing along the strand. "Take care," said a friend, "you are a good actor, but—" "But what?" asked Kean, "you don't know that I was paid thirty pounds for breaking three horses last year, at Brighton." Also that, a neighbor hearing that he was about to give readings of Milton between the acts, at Drury Lane, said:—"Kean, stick to Shakespeare; don't meddle with Milton." "Why not?" asked Kean, "I gave readings from Milton three times a week at Exmouth." As a proof of the universality of his genius, it was mentioned that he had been a fencing master and a dancing master, and at Jersey had announced that he should quit the stage and set up a school. He told Mr. Sheridan that when a child he had been applied to in order to bring him out as a rival to Master Betty; but that Sheridan had interposed, saying:—'No! one bubble at a time is enough; if you have two, they will knock against each other and burst." On December 14th, 1814, Lord Brougham dined at Mr. Kinnaird's in company with him and Lord Byron; and on that occasion he mentioned that at Stroud, in Gloucestershire, on one night he acted Shylock, danced on the tight rope, sang a song then in vogue, called "Storm," sparred with Mendoza, and then acted "Turee-fingered Jack." Kean also told us that one night he forgot his part and repeated the "Allegro" of Milton, without being detected by the audience. He gave admirable imitations of Incledon, of Kemble, of Sinclair and Master Betty. He concluded the amusements by dressing his hand up with a napkin and painting it with cork so as to look like a man, and dancing a horn-pipe with two fingers, imitating, at the same time, a bassoon so wonderfully that we looked round to see if there was no one playing that instrument in the room with us.

THE TURF.

THE SARATOGA JULY RACE MEETING.

FIFTH DAY, MONDAY, JULY 17TH.

THE HURDLE RACE WON BY OYSTERMAN—THE TWO YEAR OLD SELLING RACE BY JOE DANIELS—AND THE SEQUEL STAKES BY MARY CLARK.

In last week's CLIPPER we gave a brief summary of the fourth day's racing, our limited space preventing us, on the eve of publication, from giving a detailed report of the various races. It is now sufficient to say that George Kline's 5 yrs old colt Tubman beat Mollie Melntyre, after a really magnificent struggle, lasting from the half mile pole to the judges' stand, by a length only, in the fast time of 1:44; Patience and Grindstone's filly taking no part in the contest. In the selling race of a mile and a half, won by Mildew, Mr. Donerail's Joe Daniels made the running from start to finish, beating Nellie James, who was second throughout, by four lengths; Belmont's bay third, and Mohawk and Rounder non-here. Time, 2:40. In the two mile race, Zelna bore the yellow jacket and cap of Mr. Donerail triumphantly to the front, and the double victory of this honored Virginia turfman and true gentleman was highly popular with the assembled visitors. BASE BALL.

HAYMAKERS vs. BOSTON.

On Friday night, July 14th, the Boston nine returned home from their inaugural western tour, and on the afternoon of the following day were tendered a reception at Lenox Lyceum, the opponents being the Haymakers, who had gone there from Troy for the purpose of playing a friendly game.

The contest was somewhat interfered with by the rain, a suspension of fifteen minutes being necessitated during the fourth innings. Both George Wright was selected as umpire, and no faithfully did he fill the position that he seemed to be bound to observe complete fairness and, if anything, to lean towards the Haymakers. Play was called at twenty-five minutes before four o'clock, with the Haymakers at the bat. Their first innings gave them three runs, none of them being earned. Sunday making two errors and Start one. The Reds then took the ash and were retired for a cypher. At the end of the third innings the Troians led the game by 3 to 2. It now commenced to rain quite hard and a halt was made. On coming to the field again, the ball, after one or two passes through the wet grass, became slippery and the Bostons began to muff. Error succeeded error, and the Haymakers ran around the bases till they had scored eight runs. Start first bases being made on errors six times, only two of his being made, one of which was a splendid three-base by Kine. After this disastrous innings the Reds did better, allowing the Troy players to make only three more runs in the game. For themselves they scored seven, but the odds were too large to overcome, and the game ended 16 to 10. The defeat was attributed mainly to the fatigue of incessant traveling, principally by night, and the indisposition of several of the players McVey did not play; Gould was suffering from exposure to the sun, and Cone and Birdsall were somewhat lame. Add to these the sheer hard luck which has seemed to cling to the Reds like an incubus from the start, and their defeat is easily accounted for. The score:—

During their tour the Bostons have played eight full games, six of them being for the professional championship. Of the latter they won all but two games, so that on the whole the tour was a success. The statement which is annexed shows the batting record of the individual players:—

Several prizes depended on the result of the trip, contributed by friends of the club, and they were awarded as follows:—First prize, for most first base hits in professional matches, gold watch, chain and locket, was won by McVey; second prize, for same, $75, won by Gould; third prize, for same, $40, won by Barnes. For most first base hits in the Athletic game, a cluster diamond pin, valued at $75, won by Gould; most first base hits in Chicago game, $5, won by Cone; best average of first base hits on the whole tour, $25, won by McVey; most first bases in Olympic game, $5, won by Spalding; best in-field record, same game, $5, McVey and Schafer tied, neither having an error; best out-fielding record, same game, $5, won by Harry Wright.

ATHLETIC vs. ÆTNA.

The Athletics, of Philadelphia, played their second game in Chicago on the afternoon of the 15th inst., their opponents being the Ætnas, the champion amateur organization of the west. The Athletic took a commanding lead at once, and, playing a fine game, won easily, although in the last five innings they only added two runs to their score, so sharp was the fielding of their opponents. The playing of both clubs was a decided contrast to that of the championship contest the previous day, the Athletics especially giving a fine display of what they can do in the field, a miss by Meyerle in the last innings being the only error of fielding credited to them. Cuthbert made two magnificent running fly catches at left field, and played very creditably as catcher in the last three innings, while Malone, who had again hurt his hand, went to left field. The fielding of Bredburgh, Graves and Reid, of the Ætnas, was excellent. The umpiring of Treacy was highly satisfactory. The score:—

In reference to the above game we have received the following communication:—

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 20th, 1871.

FRANK QUEEN, ESQ.—DEAR SIR.—In your issue of the 22d inst. we noticed a challenge from the Alert B. B. C., of Syracuse, to play any amateur club in this state for the silver ball and amateur championship of Central New York. We, the members of the Rochester B. B. C., of Rochester, N. Y., do claim that they have no right to put that ball up, only for the junior championship of Central New York. Our reasons are these:—In the season of 1870 the Alert Club held a tournament for the championship of Western and Central New York, in which we took part. We won the championship of Western New York, and were to have played with the Alerts to settle whether we were champions of Central New York. It rained so that we could not play them on that day, however, and as we could not stop any longer in Syracuse, of course the Alerts kept the ball. But it was open for all clubs that played at the tournament until the last of August, 1871. We sent a challenge to them on July 1st, stating that we would play them for the silver ball and fifty dollars on the 4th day of July, in the town of Newark. We received an answer, saying they would not play us for the ball, but would for the $50. We met them at Newark on the 4th, but the rain interfered so that we could not play, so we met them at Newark again on July 13th, and beat them by the above score. Yours respectfully,

ROCHESTER CLUB.

THE HAYMAKER CLUB RECORD.

By a note from Mr. Schonfield, we are informed that the statement in regard to the number of games played with dead and lively balls is not correct. Mr. Schofield states as follows:—

When we played in Boston, May 16th, we were furnished by Mr. Wright with a "Ryan dead ball." This game we won by a score of 29 to 14, in our favor. In the game here between us and Forest City, of Rockford, we again played a Ryan ball, and won by a score of 37 to 15. We have played with Van Horn's ball four games:—Mutual, in New York, was the first one, this club being the first to introduce this ball to us on the ball field; we won by a score of 26 to 10. We then played a game with the Athletic, of Philadelphia, here, with a ball of Mr. Van Horn's make, and the Athletics beat us by a score of 49 to 33. We then tried the ball on the Mutuals, when they came up, and won by 37 to 16; and, on the 4th of July, we played with the Atlantics, here, with a Van Horn ball. I enclose a list of professional games played by us so far this season. We intend making our western tour in the middle of August, and will send complete list when perfected.

ECKFORD vs. CHICAGO.

The old time comrades of the Eckfords of former days met in base ball conflict in Chicago on the afternoon of the 17th inst., and after a splendidly contested game the Williamsburgh Eckfords were forced to succumb to the superior prowess of the Chicago Eckfords, otherwise known as the White Stockings. Concerning this game our Chicago correspondent sends us the following:—

Our people are having quite a surfeit of base ball of late, and appear to reserve the greater portion of their interest for champion-ship contests. That they do take considerable interest in the matches for the pennant, may be inferred from the fact that the occupus of the recent Athletic game amounted to within a trifle of $4,1 5, of which sum the Philadelphians pocketed nearly $1,600.

The attendance this afternoon numbered about 2,000, the result being considered a foregone conclusion, but up to the sixth innings it was anybody's, not a run having been scored on either side until the Chicagos went to the bat in that inning. The fielding of both nines up to this point had been perfection itself. The batting was sharp, many hard hits being made, but brilliant fly catching, fine stopping and accurate throwing had prevented a solitary tally. At the close of the sixth innings the Eckfords had sent only 19 men to the bat, but one of whom—Chapman—had seen first base, his being secured on a safe hit in the first innings. Up to the finish of the fifth inning the Chicagos had been represented at the bat twenty times, Treacy getting to second and McAtee to first on each hit; Hodes and Duffy getting their first on Nelson's muff, and McAtee his on called balls. Martin's pitching was watched with great interest by the spectators, and as fly after fly popped up the crowd testified their appreciation of the "slow twisters" in the heartiest manner. Of the fifteen men, nine went out on fly balls, Gedney, Swandell and Hicks doing superb execution. Of the stalwart men of the Eckfords, one half fled out to Treacy, King, Simmons and Zetlein. Both Martin and Zetlein were pitching with consummate tact, and the scoring of the first run was looked forward to in almost breathless anticipation. Treacy was first to the bat in the sixth innings, and hitting tremendously hard, sent the ball clean over the right field fence and "hit out" for a home run, but Captain Jimmy headed him off when he reached third, and sent him back to first an agreement having been entered into between the two captains that all fair balls going over the fence should yield but one base. Fred, not relishing things at first, undertook to steal second, and was nipped by Hicks to Swandell, King hit safe for first, and McAtee had his eleven hits on three balls; Simmons then went to the bat, and after an ineffectual strike, hit viciously for first, sending the ball bounding to right field, where Chapman failed to stop it, and thus gave King a fine opportunity to score the first run of the game. Pinkham hit safe for his second base, and McAtee scored. Hodes out on a well taken fly by Nelson. Zetlein next to the bat, where he proved equal to the emergency, hitting a raking hot bounder to left field, and sending Simmons and Pinkham to the home plate. George was left at second. Duffy closing the innings on foul fly to Hicks. This splendid rally deserved the applause received, for of the four runs, three were well earned, and the fourth gained not through fielding errors but on called balls.

The Eckfords went to the bat in the seventh innings, determined to break the long chain of whitewashes. Hicks first out by Hodes to McAtee. Holdsworth hit hard for first, but was forced at second by Shelley's weak hit to Hodes. Gregory an d Swandell no hit hard for first, and, with the bases all full, hopes were felt that at least one run would result, but, alas, Martin hit weak to Hodes and Gedney was forced at third, and the seventh whitewash was scored against them. The third opened the seventh innings with a fine hit by Shelley a chance for a difficult fly catch; Shelley strove nobly but dropp-d the ball, and Jimmy got to second. Treacy and King out on flys, when McAtee gave Nelson a fine chance for a whitewash, but Jack failed to improve it, and Wood struck out this run.

Things looked very much as if the Eckfords were to be forced to swallow the same kind of a dose they had administered to the Mutuals, and Phenie's good natured phiz bore a troubled expression. Swandell took his first on called balls Martin sent a lively grounder to Duffy, who handled it nicely, touched second, and then threw to McAtee at first, making a neat double play. Allison then hit a very hot bounder to Hodes, who failed to hold it in time and Andy got to second. Nelson sent a bounder to centre field, and Simmons made a wretched muff of the ball, and Allison scored. Chapman closed the innings by Treacy's unpo ed hyperbole of a very long fly ball. The Chicagos were retired in two, three and one, and then the Eckfords went in for the last time. Hicks and Holdsworth both made safe hits, but were forced out, and the side retired for the eighth time whitewashed. The compliment should have been returned the Chicagos, but Nelson's muff of Duffy's easy grounder gave the white boys two runs.

Taking the work of both nines together, to-day's game was perhaps the most faultlessly played of any that have ever taken place in this city; that the Eckfords should all score a solitary earned run on seven clean hits shows very fine fielding on the part of the Chicagos. Hodes had much to attend to, and with but two exceptions, never failed; one of these was a wild throw, which did not affect the result, but the other, a muffed bounder, aided the Simmons' inexcusable failure to stop an easy ball in his field, gave the Eckfords the one run. Duffey's one muff did not c te fatally, as the side was whitewashed that innings. King played magnificently behind the bat, not making a solitary error during the game; Treacy made four fine fly catches, and Hodes two, one of the latter's being particularly noticeable for judgment and execution. Wood and McAtee did the work to perfection, not making a muff of any kind; Pinkham had nothing whatever to attend to in the field; Gedney's sup-rb play in left field was the feature of the Eckfora's game; Swandell did remarkably well, making five fly catches, assisting as many times more, and retiring one man on his own; Nelson was in very bad luck, and played very badly; Holdsworth a so was distinguished for inefficient play, and fairly claimed the honors in that line with Nelson; Shelly took three balls in good style, but failed on one that gave the whitewash; Hicks had two passed balls, but otherwise did his work in first class style. The score:—

ATHLETICS vs. FOREST CITY, OF ROCKFORD.

The Athletics, of Philadelphia, arrived in Rockford, Illinois, on Monday, the 17th inst., and played their third game with the Forest City club, of that place. The first two games, it will be remembered, were played in Philadelphia, and resulted in unexpected defeats for the Athletics. These two games being played, however, before Scott Hastings, the catcher of the Forest City, was legally entitled to play are null and void, and the game in Rockford is consequently the first of the championship series between these two clubs. Mr. Lennon had previously been agreed upon as umpire, and the game began at 3.30 P. M., in the presence of about six hundred spectators, the weather being lovely. The Forest City went first to the bat, and after Mack had fouled out to Malone, the next five strikers punished McBride's pitching with great ease, Anson and Hastings each making two base hits, and Fisher and Addy one base hits, all to right field, and all four scored runs. Stires also made a terrific three base hit, the ball bounding back off a tree in centre field and preventing a clean home run. Ham was caught on the fly by Radcliff, and Fulmer on a fly foul by Malone. To omet this lead the Athletics only scored one run, McBride earning that by a safe hit to centre field. The Forest City were now ahead by a score of 4 to 1, but in the next three innings, so splendid was the fielding of the Athletics, they were obliged to retire without adding to their score, although Anson, in the second innings, made two bases on a fine hit, and Ham made one base and Addy was given his base on called balls in the third innings. The Athletics, on the second innings, took the lead, an advantage which they afterwards maintained throughout the game. Reach, Meyerle, Bechtel, Cuthbert and McBride scored runs in this innings, although chances were given to Addy to have put the Athletics out for one run. In the third and fourth innings Reach and Malone earned runs for the Athletics, each making two bases on good hits to centre field. This left the Athletics with the lead at the end of the fourth innings by a score of 8 to 4.

In the fifth innings of the Forest City, Fisher had a life given him by Reach and came home on Hastings' splendid three-base hit to right field, and the latter also scored a run. Meyerle made the only run for the Athletics in this innings, a wild throw by Mack leading to an unearned run; McBride was given first on called balls, but was left. The sixth and seventh innings of the Forest City resulted in blanks, Cuthbert making two brilliant running catches, and Hastings, who had made three bases by a magnificent hit to left, and Bird, who had reached second on his hit, were both left. The Athletics, however, failed to increase their score in these two innings, the Forest City s returning the compliment by whitewashing their opponents in fine style, Mack and Fulmer having exchanged positions at short and first base. In the eighth innings of the Forest City, Ham made a run, thanks to a very wild throw of Radcliff's. Cuthbert made and her wonderful running catch in this innings that was loudly applauded. Radcliff made the only run for the Athletics in this innings, after making three bases on the finest hit of the game, a "liner," to left field; Malone was given a hit by a wild throw of Fulmer's, and Fisler and Reach were pretty taken on the fly by Ham, and Malone, attempting to come home on Reach's hit, was put out by a very fine throw of Ham's to Hastings—the double play being a very fine one. Whatever hopes the Rockfordites might have had of a victory were quickly dispelled in the last innings, Anson, Fisher and Hastings going out in succession, the two former on flys by Radcliff and Cuthbert, and the latter at first base by Radcliff's ass stance. Fisler was muffed by Anson, and came home on Meyerle and Bechtel's safe one-base hits, the former being left and Cuthbert forcing Bechtel out at second. The game was extremely well played by both clubs, the Athletics having but two errors credited to them, while most of the six charged to the Rockfords were excusable errors on hard bit grounders. The Athletics' batting and fielding were remarkably good. The game was impartially umpired. The chief features were the fine fielding of Cuthbert and Ham, and excellent batting of Hastings and Meyerle. The score:—

FLY AWAY vs. ADELPHIA.

On Tuesday, 18th inst., at the Capitoline grounds, the Adelphias received a defeat at the hands of the Junior Champion Fly Aways such as no junior club had ever before administered to another. This severe, sharp play of the champions is the result of the management of the nine by its new captain, Mr. S. Shevlin, and also by the "unbattable" pitching of Brett, for the first time presented in a match game; but six bases were earned, and but one ball was knocked out of the line base.

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, July 24th, '71.

WHAT beautiful weather we have had during the past week, and what a comfort it has been to those of our community who have been unable to leave the city, through want of time or money; indeed, with such a cool and refreshing temperature as we have been enjoying, the only wonder is how the absentees can content themselves, for they must be envious of our enjoyment, and our consciences, and our nicely-cooked meals, to say nothing of the various sights and attractions which help to make come to our shores to participate in that freedom which our constitution guarantees to one and all alike, to the foreign born as well as to the native.....The article is slow and not very sunny the few places open are not all losing money; one or two, it is confidently asserted, can actually show a balance on the right side at the close of the week, which is important, if true, and very cheerful to those managers who have the nerve and the means to embark in such a perilous undertaking at a season when veterans of the stage close up, like our fashionable churches, for repairs. Sensation is the word. At Nibio's, Oliver Doud Byron will take you "Across the Continent," cheap for cash, in one night; meanwhile at the Bowery they will put you "Through by Daylight" at still lower rates.....We do not see any necessity for going to Europe after a female orchestra when we have the nucleus for one already right here on the spot, in the persons of the Bergen Sisters, now giving such delightful entertainments at Lina Edwin's Theatre, as it still called. These young ladies play on cornets, trombones and various others, with as much fluency as the members of James Fish's Ninth Regiment Band; not only this, but they also play harps (a thousand strings or less) jerk the violoncello, and manipulate the fiddle. The Bergers are certainly a talented musical party, and we are pleased to say that New York appreciates them highly. Their second feature is Mr. Sol. Russell; he has made a big hit; his line is of the "shabby genteel" sort; with his facial contortions alone he can move the spectators to hearty laughter; those who see him once want to see him more; in fact, they wish they were one of him—then there would be a pair o' Sol, but keep shady about it.....We are ashamed of our churches; many of them, for want of patronage, have shut up; while at those still open, the attendance is by no means encouraging or remunerative; but this should be no excuse for cutting down the services, as a number of our pastors are doing; lopping off a hymn here, cutting short a prayer there, interpolating pious gags in place of orthodox examples, and putting the whole thing through in less than one hour, worn thin at that. When we go to church, we want the entire programme carried out. The other Sabbath evening we went to church early, in order to get a good seat; great was our surprise to see the sanctuary scarcely one-third full at any time during the services. The earnest was short, the hymn was short, and when we got down upon our knees to pray, he was our worst in other days, judge of our feelings when we heard the choir strike up the doxology at a quarter past ten, and before we had sufficiently recovered from our surprise to arise upon our feet, the man who occupied the pulpit was rattling away at the benediction as if he hadn't a minute in which to catch the next train. Oh, brethren, this will never do; pause where you are; consider the pious fraud you are practicing upon us. We tell you as a friend, brethren, you must do better than this if you expect the people to patronize you. We have no objection to we-linet lolling upon you, fanning your fevered brow, giving the sacred kiss, and all that sort of religious flummery, for it is their nature to; but, beloved pastors and sanctified deacons, don't let this flock make you lose sight of your calling, which is to save sinners by the example of truth and virtue, and elevated and ennobling thoughts, instead of letting them flounder in the mud and mire of their iniquity, or sending them to perdition on the lightning train. Quit of it, brethren; you have your own souls to save; don't, therefore, we beseech you, jeopardize your future salvation by going back on your congregations; you get good wages; presume not upon your privilege to smite Europe after a female orchestra when we have the nucleus for one already right here on the spot, in the persons of the Bergen Sisters, now giving such delightful entertainments at Lina Edwin's Theatre, as it still called. These young ladies play on cornets, trombones and various others, with as much fluency as the members of James Fish's Ninth Regiment Band; not only this, but they also play harps (a thousand strings or less) jerk the violoncello, and manipulate the fiddle. The Bergers are certainly a talented musical party, and we are pleased to say that New York appreciates them highly. Their second feature is Mr. Sol. Russell; he has made a big hit; his line is of the "shabby genteel" sort; with his facial contortions alone he can move the spectators to hearty laughter; those who see him once want to see him more; in fact, they wish there

THE SAILOR LADDIES on board the U. S. Steam Frigate Guerriere have a minstrel band called the Guerriere Minstrels. They give their fourth performance at Smyrna, Syria, on June 17th, and in July they expected to perform at Trieste. The following is a list of the company:—Oliver Morningstar, bones; George Johnson, tambourine; D. W. Glines, concertina; C. Hazleton, violin; Geo. Gage, guitar; J. Turner, banjo; L. A. Cowles, Frank Waddell, John O'Donnell, and F. H. Irving, quartet. F. H. Irving is the manager and J. Turner the treasurer.

ROLLIN HOWARD is passing his summer vacation with a party of friends upon the yacht Tribe, and cruising among the Bay Islands of Casco Bay. On July 19th, they ran into Portland, Me., and passed an evening, during which, a quintet, organized among the party, serenaded the editor of the Press and other prominent citizens. The quintet consisted of Rollin Howard, tenor; J. Foster, second tenor; E. A. Pierce, alto; A. A. Adams, baritone, and R. W. Hamblin, bass. Mr. Howard is engaged to commence his fall season at the Front Street Theatre, Baltimore, Md., August 28th, where he takes the stage management of the minstrel department.

TALBOT, EDWARDS AND PARKES' MINSTRELS performed in Titusville, Pa., July 22d.

JAPANESE TOMMY returns from Europe in August, and will join the Morris Brothers' Minstrels.

DUPREE AND BENNINGTON'S MINSTRELS performed in Sioux City, Iowa, July 26th and 27th, and are billed ahead as follows:—Des Moines, 28th and 29th; Keokuk, 27th; Fort Madison, 28th; Davenport, 29th; Rock Island, Ill., 31st, and Genesseo, August 1st.

CAL WAGNER'S MINSTRELS are billed ahead as follows:—Peoria, Ill., July 27th; Bloomington, 28th; Joliet, 29th; Waukegan, Wis., 31st; Racine, August 1st; Watertown, 2d; Fond du Lac, 3d; Green Bay, 4th; Portage City, 5th; Sparta, 6th; Lacrosse, 10th, and thence to St. Paul.

MUN RENTZ'S FEMALE MINSTRELS performed in Windsor, N. S., July 10th; Kentville, 11th; Bridgetown, 12th; Annapolis, 13th; Lawrencetown, 14th; Berwick, 15th; Wolfville, 17th; Charlottetown, P. E. Island, 19th, 20th, 21st and 22d, thence they are announced to go to Cape Breton, stopping at Antigonist, Fort Mulgrave and Sherbrooke.

MANNING'S MINSTRELS inaugurated a season of four nights and one matinee at the Academy of Music, Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 19th inst. The company has played to fair business, and the entertainments have generally satisfied the auditors. Billy Manning and Ben Cotten are creditable end men, and La Mont's singing is worthy the applause he receives. Stella Rogers and little Addie dance cleverly. Records personating female characters with charming fidelity, and Frank Kent is all that could be asked in the same line. The other artists are acceptable in their various specialties. There is no repetition of programmes; a new one for each entertainment. So wrote our correspondent on July 21st. They were billed to perform in Titusville 24th.

BILLY COTTON, Ethiopian comedian, advertises that he can be engaged after Aug. 15th.

Circuses.

SHELDENBERGER & CO'S MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS exhibited at Bloomington, Ind., on July 17th, to fair business. A correspondent, traveling with this show, writing from Greencastle, Ind., on July 19th, says:—"The day before a terrific storm swept over the country, destroying property, laying waste thousands of acres of land, and washing away miles of fences and roads. The show drove from Martinsville to Bloomington, a distance of twenty miles, and it took just twenty hours to make the drive. From this it will be seen that the road was a terrible one. The show reached Bloomington at 12 o'clock precisely, and the doors were open at 1 o'clock, when the seats were up, cages set, ring made, and everything in order. Putting up a first class show in a single hour is something that has rarely if ever been done before, and Tom Foy, the master of ceremonies, deserves great credit for accomplishing the feat. The Sheldenberger show drove out of Bloomington towards Gosport on Tuesday morning, at 6 o'clock, and at 7 o'clock the Great European Circus, with its grand tableau cars, chariots and all its immense paraphernalia, drove into town. The Sheldenberger and the European shows passed each other, one coming from and the other going to the same town—and the jibes that were exchanged and the jokes that were passed as each successive wagon passed were more than highly edifying to your readers if they were to be published. Just before we got here Adam Forepaugh 'billed' us with dodgers. After entering the state we had a conflict with Rosston, Springer & Co., and they have gone into Illinois. Next we met J. E. Warner & Co., and he has gone to Michigan. Then we came upon Charles Warner's Circus and completely established it. It 'Snowed' in Hope, Ind., on Wednesday, July 12th, 1871. Immediately after we came in contact with the Great European Circus, and now we are on the route of Cooper and Hemming's and Yankee Robinson, while next week it is a war between us and Van Amburgh's Menagerie and Circus. In the face of all this, we have done a large business." This company performed in Cloverdale, Ind., July 19th; Brazil, 20th; Rockville, 21st; Montezuma, 22d; and is billed to perform in Paris, Ill., the 24th, and Marshall, 26th.

THE EUROPEAN CIRCUS is billed to perform in Louisville, Ky., July 25th, 26th and 27th.

THE ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC CIRCUS, whose route ahead to July 24th we published in our past issue, is billed to perform at Wasatch, Utah, July 25th; Evanston, 26th; Green River, 27th; Laramie City, Wyoming, 28th; Cheyenne City, 29th; Denver, Colorado, 31st, Aug. 1st, 2d, 3d and 4th; Golden City, 7th; Idaho, 8th; Georgetown, 9th; Central City, 10th, 11th and 12th; Boulder, 14th; Burlington, 15th, and Evans, 16th.

G. G. GRADY'S CIRCUS performed in Galion, O., July 17th; Orrville, 18th; Massillon, 19th; Mansfield, 20th; Canton, 21st; Wooster, 22d, and is billed to perform in Alliance, 23d.

JOHN ROBINSON'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE performed in Bentonsport, Iowa, July 17th, and Ottumwa, 18th.

WOOTTEN & HAIGHT'S EMPIRE CITY CIRCUS will shortly leave the province of New Brunswick, where they are at present performing, have char'ered the steamer Emperor and will visit the towns on the northern and western coast. Their route will be Fredericton, St. John, Moncton, Cuatham, N. B.; Daysboro, Lawnenburgh, Liverpool and Yarmouth, N. S.; Sydney and other towns in Cape Breton, Charlottestown and other towns in Prince Edward's Island.

JOHN T. ROBINSON, who, it is believed, is running an independent side show, is anxiously inquired after by his brother, Daniel Z. Robinson, of Bucyrus, O., who has heard nothing of or from him for over one year.

V. A. ARMSTRONG & Co.'s GREAT GOLDEN MENAGERIE performed in Laporte, Ind., July 21st, and Valparaiso 22d.

W. H. GREEN, a six horse rider, who traveled many years with Dan Rice's Circus, died in Baltimore, Md., July 19th, at the University Hospital, of rheumatic gout and general debility, in the fifty-eighth year of his age. The ward master, Mr. Cranford, is said to have been very attentive to him during his illness. His funeral was attended by his wife and relatives and a few personal friends. He was buried in Baltimore Cemetery.

JAMES ROBINSON'S CIRCUS opened in Cincinnati on Monday, the 17th, playing all the week there. Concerning it, our correspondent writes:—"They have drawn fairly each afternoon, and at night the canvas has been densely packed. The location of the lot is excellent (corner of Laurel street and Central avenue), right in the heart of the city, and almost any circus would do well there. The fine bareback acts of James Robinson and his boy Clarence have excited great enthusiasm. Frank Pastor is also an excellent pad rider. The only lady rider is Jeannette Armstrong. The tumbling and gymnastic performances by Shappee and Whitney, and the Davenport Brothers, are among the best we have ever had here. William Burke is a clever young clown, and, taken all through, the show is a very good one. On Monday, the adventurous aronaut who accompanies the circus, made an ascension, filling the balloon with hot air. When the air cools the balloon collapses very rapidly. This time he did not descend quickly enough, but was not hurt. He did not make another attempt until yesterday (Thursday), but had hardly risen fairly up until the balloon began shooting down like a rocket stick. He managed to dive into the second-story of Bonte's picture frame factory, being caught by the employees, or he would not have been in condition to ascend again. These accidents with hot air are fool-hardy. The aeronaut risks his neck every time he goes up. He had a similar experience in Louisville last week."

DAN RICE'S PARIS PAVILION CIRCUS is billed for Syracuse, N. Y., July 26th, 27th and 28th. Their route ahead is as follows:—Oneida, July 29th; Utica, 31st; Herkimer, Aug. 1st; Little Falls, 2d; Fort Plain, 3d; Amsterdam, 4th; Schenectady, 5th; Troy, 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th; Saratoga Springs, 11th and 12th.

O'BRIEN'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE is billed ahead as follows:—Junction, N. Y., July 26th; Fulton, 28th; Oswego, 27th; Baldwinsville, 28th; Syracuse, 29th; Central Square, 31st; Cleveland, O., August 1st; Camden, 2d; Rome, 3d; Boonville, 4th; Lowville, 5th.

W. W. NICHOLS, the American backward rider, joined Forepaugh's Circus and Menagerie at Portsmouth, O., July 22d.

HAILEY'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE exhibited in Toronto, Ont., July 18th and 19th.

JOHN BROWN'S CIRCUS is billed to perform in Quincy, Ill., July 24th.

MYRLE, JEAL'S CIRCUS performed in Salem, Oregon, July 8th; Oregon City, 10th, and commenced a short season in Portland on the 12th.

G. G. GRADY'S CIRCUS performed in Massillon, O., July 22d, and is billed to perform in Canton, 24th; Alliance, 25th; thence to Pittsburgh and Allegheny City for one week.

JOHN ROBINSON'S CIRCUS, MUSEUM AND MENAGERIE is billed to exhibit at Joliet, Ill., August 28th; Chicago for one week, commencing the 31st. Since its start in the spring, seven cages of animals have been added, including a den of three sea lions.

VAN AMBURGH AND CO'S MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS, Hyatt Frost, manager, is billed to perform in Louisville, Ill., July 24th; Keith, 25th; Fairfield, 26th; Albion, 27th; Mount Carmel, 28th; Franklin, Ind., 29th; Oyster, 31st; New Harmony, August 1st; Mount Vernon, 2d; Evansville, 3d; Boonville, 4th, and County Seat, 5th. The business since the harvest is reported very good.

VAN AMBURGH AND CO'S GREAT GOLDEN MENAGERIE, Henry Barnum, manager, is billed to exhibit at Crownpoint, Ind., July 24th; Keith, 25th; Fairfield, 26th; Albion, 27th; Mount Carmel, 28th; Franklin, Ind., 29th; Oyster, 31st; New Harmony, August 1st; Mount Vernon, 2d; Evansville, 3d; Boonville, 4th, and County Seat, 5th. The business since the harvest is reported very good.

JAMES MELVILLE publishes in another column a reply to Robt. Stickney's card inserted in our last issue. Mr. Melville also challenges Robt. Stickney, on behalf of his son Frank, or, if he declines to accept, any other rider, to ride a trick for a trick, or a pad, and accompanies his defi with a draft for one thousand dollars.

Johnson, Gardiner & Richmond's CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE performed in Williamsburg, Ill., July 17th; Morris, July 18th; Dwight, 19th; Pontiac, 20th; Lexington, 21st; Bloomington, 22d, and is billed to perform in Leroy the 24th.

THE DOUBLE-HEADED INFANT died in Boston, Mass., where it was shortly to have been exhibited in public, on July 19th. The child was the daughter of Joseph and Ann E. Finley, who reside in Monroe county, Ohio, where they carry on a farm. It had two heads, four arms and two legs, all upon a single body. The heads were at either extremity of a single trunk; and two legs grew on one side from the centre of the trunk, while on the opposite side was a leg or arm only partially formed. The legs were pretty and perfectly formed. It had been exhibited in Pittsburgh, Pa., and Philadelphia, and was in Boston about to be exhibited as above stated. The child had enjoyed excellent health from her birth, nine months ago, until within two weeks, at which time one-half exhibited signs of illness. This, however, was but temporary. It recovered and was bright and playful. Since reaching Boston, the other half was taken sick, and died at 5 o'clock on the 19th, the other surviving until 8 o'clock in the evening. The spectacle was equally novel, strange and unparalleled. Upon one end of the body reposed the head of the dead infant; upon the other that of the live one, with the eyes still bright and curious and its lungs in full breathing order. All that medical skill could accomplish was done, but it was found unavailing. The child died in the presence of its parents. The curious presents the appearance of two infants asleep. Apparently they escaped the ordinary suffering incident to death, for the countenances had the expression of repose.

PROF. G. W. CHAPPE, rope walker, and a panorama of New York City, together with Donaldo, the mimic, and Miss Louie Irving, who joined the exhibition at Beloit, Wis., July 1st, were at Portage City, Wis., July 20th.

JEFFRY, "the man with the talking hand," gave two entertainments in Rochester, N. Y., July 19th and 20th.

S. H. HAYWARD, whose address is among the advertisements, has for sale a panorama.

PROF. DAVIS and his performing dogs, Herbert Lieber, magician, and F. A. Genly, comic vocalist, are the newest cards at Simpson's Museum, Philadelphia.

WASHBURN'S LAST SENSATION is billed to perform in Danbury, Conn., Aug. 1st.

Amateur.

A NEW AMATEUR ASSOCIATION.—A meeting was held on Thursday, July 20th, at Military Hall, 105 Bowery, for the purpose of organizing an association to be known as the Terrace Garden Dramatic Association. The result of the election of officers was as follows:—President, M. Bingham; treasurer, H. Gale; stage manager, R. S. Henry; secretary, G. D. Bayley. They promise to present "Hamlet" at the above named garden in September in a style hitherto unequaled in the annals of New York amateur performances.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

Dramatic.

OUR LATEST ADVICES from London, Eng., which are up to July 8th, give intelligence that no dramatic novelty of importance had been produced at any of the west end theatres where English plays are acted. A new musical extravaganza, entitled, "Nell Gwynne," had been added to the programme at the Royalty.....At the Standard, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Paul were to have commenced an engagement on July 10th, during their entertainment, and the Double Headed Nightingale or, Two-headed Girl, was to have appeared nightly.....At the Alfred "Across the Continent" was produced on July 3d with T. C. Keane as the Hermit and W. H. Chaloner as Jeremiah Jessamy.....At the Pavilion, J. S. Blakeley was to have commenced an engagement on July 31st, acting in "Box and Cox" and "Lend Me Five Shillings." Hermann, the prestidigitateur, was also announced.....Concerning the performances at the Standard, the Sunday Times presents the following:—"Mr. Pennington has been attending good audiences at the Standard Theatre, where, on the last two evenings of the week, he has appeared as Othello and Iago. In the former character the gentleman gave a soldierly impersonation of the rough and impassioned Moor. His set speeches, in some instances, were well delivered, and the fire of his words and looks not too capable depicted the wild will until the last scene. His towering passion when Iago first breathes his fiendish suspicions, was not overdrawned for effect, and his rage was not of that unbounded character too often associated with the part. On Thursday Mr. Pennington appeared as Richard III., a character is one of the best, if not the best, of his Shakespearean impersonations. It gave evidence of careful study, and received unequivocal marks of approval from the audience. On Wednesday the play announced was "Macbeth," by a Miss Fremeyer, from America. [We never heard of the lady here.—Ed.]—attempting the character of the Danish prince. We say 'attempt,' for the performance was wanting in power and conception. To be sure the lady was called for at the end of nearly every act, and some speeches were well delivered, but on the whole, it was far from satisfactory. Miss Tremayne is no doubt an efficient actress in her proper sphere, but her Hamlet is a mistake. Mr. Dobson was a good King, and Mr. Greenborough, if a little overweighted, was commendable as Gertrude. Miss Saunders was Ophelia, and Mr. Hamilton was exceedingly statuesque, whilst the ghost was one of the most unearthly theatrical could wish to hear."..... No change had occurred or was announced at any other theatre.

THE DIRECTORS OF THE PARIS THEATRES formerly subsidized continue to live in the most complete uncertainty as to their future. In the meantime the government has submitted to the commission the following project:—Instead of 820,000 francs, as it had under the empire, the Opera shall have a subvention of not more than 800,000 francs. The Opera Comique shall receive the same amount; that is to say, 240,000 francs. L'Odeon shall have not more than 60,000 instead of 160,000 francs. The subventions to the Opera Comique, the Theatre Lyrique and the Theatre Italien shall be completely suppressed. It is expected that the Chambers, after the recess, will, on this project may be modified, but at present such are the intentions of the government. Nine theatres are open, that is—The Opera, Italian Opera, Opera Comique, Les Varietes, the Folies Dramatiques, the Theatre Lyrique, the Chatelet, La Gaiete, Les Folies Dramatiques and the Theatre Beaumarchais. These theatres give representations regularly each night. Les Varietes, the Palais Royal Theatre and the Chatelet are managed by actors associated together, the others have their ordinary administrators. They live on their existing list of plays, for, under the new order of things, it is forbidden to represent any new piece. Several novelties are in rehearsal, to be played when that shall be permitted.

THE DRAMATIC TALENT of the inhabitants of Upper Savoyle, which has gained such a world-wide celebrity by means of the Parisian plays of Lemercier de Neuville, has been put in force by the mountain villages to welcome the returning soldiers. The whole of the arrangements were very simple. The people of the village formed a chorus similar to that of the classical tragedy. The returning soldiers, on their arrival, repeated pieces of dialogue, the principal events of the war, and at the close of each the chorus sang one of the popular songs of the country, which harmonized in feeling with the impression made by the preceding piece. The first piece, I, if we may use the word to describe a dirge, of a kind almost as destitute of scenery as the stage of Shakespeare, represented the departure of the soldiers from their home, and the last their return to it. Between the two lay the hard fought days from Wissembourg to Sedan, and the whole was a kind of epic, recapitulated among the villagers, and has been executed by them alone.

"MISS MARIE WILTON and her husband will shortly start for an American tour. Rumor adds that thereafter Miss Wilton intends to take the leave of the stage. We hope, however, that this is but a premature." So states the Observer.

HENRI MOCKERTAU has finished a new drama entitled "Madeline Morgan," the subject of which is derived from the life of the society of the present day.

M. L. DE MOLESSON has proceeded to the Society of the Dramatic Authors to exclude from their body MM. Felix Pyat, Victor Hugo, Alexandre Dumas, Fred Maurice, and, in a word, all such members as have, by their acts or writings, defended the doctrines of the Commune.

THE CEREMONY OF LAYING the first stone of the new Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, Ireland, took place on July 1st, the Right Honorable the Lord Mayor of that city officiating. It was not the foundation stone of the building (as had been the case in the Adelphi), much advanced towards completion. Immediately after the arrival of the Lord Mayor, at three o'clock, the architect, Mr. Phipps, read the following description of the new theatre:—"The new theatre occupies a portion of the site of the old Theatre Royal, Hawkins street, which was destroyed by fire in 1867, and of Crampton Court, Temple lane. The width of the frontage in King street is 66ft.; in Temple lane, 70ft. The entrances for the public will be in King street with distinct doorways and entrances to each of the four divisions of the audience. The pit will have twenty-two rows of seats, the balcony seats seven, the first circle sixth six, the amphitheatre ten, the gallery nine, according in all accommodation for 3,000 persons. The entrance hall will be three, the corridors for lounging and refreshment rooms adjoin the corridor of each tier. The entrance to the stage will be from Temple lane, and on the right of stage entrance are the green room, dressing rooms, &c. The dimensions of the theatre are as follows:—From curtain line to back of pit, 50ft.; from curtain line to front of balcony seats, 35ft.; from curtain line to first circle seats, 44ft.; from curtain line to amphitheatre, 67ft.; from footlights to back wall of stage, 51ft.; width between walls of stage, 50ft.; width of the proscenium opening, 30ft.; height of the proscenium opening, 30ft.; height from pit floor to centre of ceiling, 46ft. when completed, 90ft. It will be lighted by a sunburner in centre of ceiling, with a ventilating shaft round same, carried up through roof. There will also be flues for ventilation in the ceiling of each tier, carried up to roof. The footlights will not be seen, it is said here afterwards, as all parties will be in subvention. Instead, that is to say, 240,000 francs. L'Odeon shall have not more than 60,000 instead of 160,000 francs. The subventions to the Opera Comique, the Theatre Lyrique and the Theatre Italien shall be completely suppressed. It is expected that the Chambers, after the recess, will, on this project may be modified, but at present such are the intentions of the government. Nine theatres are open, that is—The Opera, Italian Opera, Opera Comique, Les Varietes, the Folies Dramatiques, the Theatre Lyrique, the Chatelet, La Gaiete, Les Folies Dramatiques and the Theatre Beaumarchais. These theatres give representations regularly each night. Les Varietes, the Palais Royal Theatre and the Chatelet are managed by actors associated together, the others have their ordinary administrators. They live on their existing list of plays, for, under the new order of things, it is forbidden to represent any new piece. Several novelties are in rehearsal, to be played when that shall be permitted.

THE DRAMATIC TALENT of the inhabitants of Upper Savoyle, which has gained such a world-wide celebrity by means of the Parisian plays of Lemercier de Neuville, has been put in force by the mountain villages to welcome the returning soldiers. The whole of the arrangements were very simple. The people of the village formed a chorus similar to that of the classical tragedy. The returning soldiers, on their arrival, repeated pieces of dialogue, the principal events of the war, and at the close of each the chorus sang one of the popular songs of the country, which harmonized in feeling with the impression made by the preceding piece. The first piece, I, if we may use the word to describe a dirge, of a kind almost as destitute of scenery as the stage of Shakespeare, represented the departure of the soldiers from their home, and the last their return to it. Between the two lay the hard fought days from Wissembourg to Sedan, and the whole was a kind of epic, recapitulated among the villagers, and has been executed by them alone.

"MISS MARIE WILTON and her husband will shortly start for an American tour. Rumor adds that thereafter Miss Wilton intends to take the leave of the stage. We hope, however, that this is but a premature." So states the Observer.

HENRI MOCKERTAU has finished a new drama entitled "Madeline Morgan," the subject of which is derived from the life of the society of the present day.

M. L. DE MOLESSON has proceeded to the Society of the Dramatic Authors to exclude from their body MM. Felix Pyat, Victor Hugo, Alexandre Dumas, Fred Maurice, and, in a word, all such members as have, by their acts or writings, defended the doctrines of the Commune.

THE CEREMONY OF LAYING the first stone of the new Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, Ireland, took place on July 1st, the Right Honorable the Lord Mayor of that city officiating. It was not the foundation stone of the building (as had been the case in the Adelphi), much advanced towards completion. Immediately after the arrival of the Lord Mayor, at three o'clock, the architect, Mr. Phipps, read the following description of the new theatre:—"The new theatre occupies a portion of the site of the old Theatre Royal, Hawkins street, which was destroyed by fire in 1867, and of Crampton Court, Temple lane. The width of the frontage in King street is 66ft.; in Temple lane, 70ft. The entrances for the public will be in King street with distinct doorways and entrances to each of the four divisions of the audience. The pit will have twenty-two rows of seats, the balcony seats seven, the first circle sixth six, the amphitheatre ten, the gallery nine, according in all accommodation for 3,000 persons. The entrance hall will be three, the corridors for lounging and refreshment rooms adjoin the corridor of each tier. The entrance to the stage will be from Temple lane, and on the right of stage entrance are the green room, dressing rooms, &c. The dimensions of the theatre are as follows:—From curtain line to back of pit, 50ft.; from curtain line to front of balcony seats, 35ft.; from curtain line to first circle seats, 44ft.; from curtain line to amphitheatre, 67ft.; from footlights to back wall of stage, 51ft.; width between walls of stage, 50ft.; width of the proscenium opening, 30ft.; height of the proscenium opening, 30ft.; height from pit floor to centre of ceiling, 46ft. when completed, 90ft. It will be lighted by a sunburner in centre of ceiling, with a ventilating shaft round same, carried up through roof. There will also be flues for ventilation in the ceiling of each tier, carried up to roof. The footlights will not be seen, it is said here afterwards, as all parties will be in subvention. Instead, that is to say, 240,000 francs. L'Odeon shall have not more than 60,000 instead of 160,000 francs. The subventions to the Opera Comique, the Theatre Lyrique and the Theatre Italien shall be completely suppressed. It is expected that the Chambers, after the recess, will, on this project may be modified, but at present such are the intentions of the government. Nine theatres are open, that is—The Opera, Italian Opera, Opera Comique, Les Varietes, the Folies Dramatiques, the Theatre Lyrique, the Chatelet, La Gaiete, Les Folies Dramatiques and the Theatre Beaumarchais. Variety Halls.

VERY LITTLE CHANGE had been made at the various music halls in London, Eng., during our last report, except that Mr. Leopold Ambrose, Marseille, Bauer and Tournier, wrestlers, were to have been added to the company on July 10th.....At the South London Palace, Nelson, the man from, and Herr Rotten, cannon ball and Indian club performers, were the latest additions to the company of the other halls.....The first class performers at these halls are quite numerous, but few in number, but they appear at some three or four halls each evening, giving the same performance at each.

AT BIRMINGHAM, Eng., at the Crystal Palace, "Polly" Little Lowe, comic vocalist; Miss Pelham, serio-comic; Newton Chappell, comedian; Charley Chastity Minstrels; Frances Brown, dancer, and R. H. Kinton, pantomime, were the chief attractions.....At the Birmingham, Alfred Dixie, comic; Lou and Miss Hunt, dancing-room proprietors; Miss Bayliss, serio-comic; Miss Lizzie Hyde, Miss Minnie Archer, serio-comic; Alberte and Wood, negro comedians; Miss Catherwood, dancer; Mr. Otis, vocalist; Mr. and Mrs. Hemsley, duettists, and Mr. Lloyd, comic, were the attractions.....At the London Museum, Mr. Valentine, dagger on the invisible wire; Ted Snow and E. Mackin, Ethiopian comedians; The Estelle ladies troupe; R. Hales, comic; and Miss Janet Richards, ballad singer, were the leading features.....At the Mean Cheek, Bertie Richards, vocalist; Sam Dudley, negro; Miss Nelly Adams, serio-comic and dancer; Harry Coker, comic; and Clifford Morris, baritone, were the principal performers.

AT THE ALHAMBRA, Leicester Square, Eng., was re-opened July 3d, when an appropriate address was delivered by Mr. Templeton, the stage manager, on behalf of the proprietor. The company included Fred Jefferson, the pantomimist; Miss Emily Soldene, Miss Annie Milton, Miss Crossley, J. M'Dowall and J. Van Bay.

THE OXFORD MUSIC HALL, Brighton, Eng., is closed for alterations, and was announced to re-open during the latter part of the month.

AT THE PAVILION PALACE, Leeds, Eng., Harry Richards, comic; Miss Marie Stuart, comic; Miss Flora, transformation dancer, and Kate Garstone, serio-comic, were also added to the company on that date.

WALS. MONTES'S ANGLO-AMERICAN COMBINATION was performing in Baltic, Russia, June 29th, and our correspondent adds:—"They were playing to large audiences, and expected to leave on the 30th by the English mail steamer for Rio de Janiero."

THE CHANGES AT THE VARIOUS HALLS in Liverpool, Eng., may be found in the following:—Mr. Lloyd, of the New Star, Mr. Colquhoun with his tumblerosonians was the chief feature. French and Angelo, gymnasts, had put in an appearance. In addition to the above the Le Castro troupe, Miss Rosamond Ray, Miss Rose Dee, Miss Lizzie Brooke, Mr. and Mrs. Hemsley, Miss Lizzie Hyde, Miss Annie Milton, the Sisters McGregor Simpson, Miss Ada Hornsby, Mr. D. Bryan, the Sisters McGregor Simpson, Miss Ada Hornsby, Mr. D. Saunders, Mrs. Saunders, Mr. J. Sandell, Mr. McConnell, a charming ballad discoverer, and the Estelle troupe, were the features of the week, which was presented to an admiring house.....Rose, M. Pearce's own artistic instincts and great intelligence came into play with Miss Marion Taylor, who assisted in the performance, as that OSWEGO, N. Y., June 29th, 1871.

MESSRS. FITCH, GENTLEMEN.—Although considerable time has elapsed since my visit to your city, I have not forgotten the promise I then made to write you my opinion of your new Opera House. My promise has been kept fresh in my mind through constant comparison of your hall with others in which my company has sung since, and going still back of that to the very commencement of my season in October last, I can truthfully say that during our whole season and extended tour the company has not occupied an opera house or hall, excepting the larger ones in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and, perhaps, Syracuse, which has pleased the entire party so much as YOUR ELEGANT AND COMFORTABLE LITTLE HOUSE DID.
To find a more complete house of its class in the United States would be difficult, while in Canada, which we have just left, there is nothing to compare with it. Yours sincerely,
C. D. HESS, Director English Opera.
